Another—Biggest Bank Poor Broker—Sold Short—
The "Grandeur" Film
Children, Kitchen, Church

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

AGAIN, "the world's biggest bank" makes its bow, bigger than any thus far.

Charles E. Mitchell, head of New York's National City Bank, absorbs the Corn Exchange Bank, creating an institution with resources of two thousand six hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

This financial giant will have 100 branch banks in New York. The old fashioned million has given way to the new "billion."

When will the TRILLION be transferred from books on astronomy to the books of United States bankers?

In Wall Street, a broker has closed up. His story is sad and brief. HE SOLD SHORT. And, most strange, he sold bank stocks short.

To sell "short" a bank stock with banks getting from 10 to 20 per cent for money on call, calls for an investigation in lunacy.

William Fox's new "Grandeur" film showing moving and talking pictures on a screen of gigantic size, now seen in New York, is a most important contribution to the motion picture art and industry.

Mr. Fox is to be congratulated upon an achievement most remarkable and beautiful, combined with perfect sound, a screen that makes it possible to show the falls of Niagara, the rapids below and the Maid of the Midst, all at one time.

This new Fox moving picture, developing motion, depth, size and sound on a scale hitherto undreamed of, is a most remarkable achievement.

The German Kaiser said women should attend to their three K's, Kinder, Kueche, Kirche—"Children, Kitchen, Church." He will be surprised to read the statistics about working people in Britain.

Among those that work from 15 to 55, there are 1,500,000 more women than men.

Britain is disturbed because the nation seems to have reached the "stationary point in population."

No wonder. The same animal cannot be a good brood mare and a good cart horse.

Science says old age is really an illness, not inevitable. Age is called "progressive condensation of tissue due to loss of water."

Energy that age lacks is located in the ductless glands. When your own glands wear out some of them, including some of the most important, can be rejuvenated.

One pupil of Steinach in Vienna has restored youth and "the desire to whistle and sing" in 700 old men.

100 INJURED WHEN BRIGHT NIGHT CLUB IS BURNED

Eight of Dead Victims Were Women; a Mad Stampede Snuffs Out Many Lives

Detroit, Sept. 20—Seventeen persons, including eight women, were killed and 100 others injured, many seriously, in a fire which swept the Study Club, a night club on the edge of the downtown theater district, early today.

One hundred and thirty patrons and forty employes, including entertainers, were in the night club when flames broke through the wall at the first floor and swept up the main stairway, cutting off the only means of egress.

One theory that a "wet bomb" caused the fire is doubted by officials.

Criminal negligence is charged by the local prosecutor's office, which declares the club was a "fire trap."

It is alleged there were no adequate exits and that some of the windows were boarded up in violation of the law.

Patrolman James McGuire, who discovered the blaze, ran to a nearby fire box, and returned to find the flames and smoke roaring up the staircase.

FIND 30 IN PILE

A cigarette girl was suffocated by the hot fumes as she stood in the center of the dance floor and dropped down over her tray. Her body was found by firemen.

Many patrons groped their way into a small dressing room, 7 by 15 feet, in the rear of the building. Thirty of them were found piled unconscious in the tiny space when firemen broke into the room. Several of them were dead. Others were badly injured.

The interior of the building was ruined, but the exterior presented an almost unblemished appearance save for broken windows and fire-escape which hangs useless, a mockery to those who ventured to test it as an exit.

Marty Cohen, proprietor of the club, and Robert Jackson, master of ceremonies, were questioned by police soon after the tragedy occurred. Cohen was ordered held pending further inquiry into the disaster.

Cohen attributed the fire to rivals in business and advanced the bomb idea.

The Study Club had been operating for about a year and had prospered.

Cohen was not in the place at the time of the fire. Another night club, the Lido, had its opening last night and he had gone to participate, he told police.

Most of the fatalities, physicians said, resulted from suffocation. Identification of the dead was difficult because of the badly burned clothing and the disfigurement which follows suffocation.

FLAMES SPREAD DEATH

State and city fire commissioners, who are investigating the blaze with the police, declared they could find no evidence to support suspected incendiarism.

Draperies and light flimsy decorations, they said, accounted for the rapid spread of the flames. Ventilating fans and the architecture of the building sped the flames on their mission of death and devastation.

The bodies of five women lie in the county morgue unidentified. Their clothing was burned off and

MOTHER OF TWO TRAPS ANOTHER

Mrs. Florence Cohalan, mother of two children and former Government informer, appeared as a witness for the second time in two days before U. S. Commissioner Jenney today.

As a result of her testimony, Meyer C. Rubin, proprietor of a drug store on Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, was held for the federal grand jury for alleged illegal sale of liquor.

Yesterday Mrs. Cohalan gave testimony which resulted in Samuel W. Kramer, Cambridge st. druggist, being held on a similar charge.

Mrs. Cohalan, who was employed for 20 days in August at $5 a day, testified that on the evening of Aug. 26 she purchased a pint of gin from Rubin for $1.50, which she turned over to a prohibition agent.

On Aug. 21, she said, she had purchased half a pint of gin from a clerk.

Rubin was discharged on the charge of possession of liquor, as was his clerk, Morris Snider.

VANISHES WITH $512,000

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—B. V. Hiscoe & Co., brokers at 111 Broadway, notified police today that a messenger had disappeared with securities valued at $512,000.

Police said the messenger, Milton Alter, was sent to the bank with a check for $400,000 to get the securities. He was to wait for other clerks to escort him back to the office.

When his escort arrived, Alter already had obtained the securities, police said, and disappeared.

Alter is 18 and had been employed by the brokerage firm since August 26.

Firm officials announced only $72,000 of the half-million dollars' worth of securities are negotiable. The securities had been left at the collateral for a $400,000 loan and were redeemed by Alter when he turned over the check.

8 Children Revolt, Kill 2, Burn Home

Moscow, Sept. 20 (INS)—Eight inmates of the Uktomskaya home for defective children, near here, rebelled, murdered the director and an instructor, then set fire to the buildings. Fifty-five other children barely escaped alive.

The Department of Education allowed 11.26 rubles ($5.80) monthly per inmate for all expenses and sent all types of children there, from mentally defective to those actually convicted of murder.

800,000 CAR OWNERS HIT BY JUMP

Companies to Charge $3 for the Policy; the Former Cost Was $2

Bad news for more than 800,000 Massachusetts motor car owners was made public today at the State House hearing on auto insurance.

Attorney John W. Dowse, counsel for the Massachusetts Insurance Federation, told the special legislative commission that insurance companies have just put through a 50 per cent increase in the rates for writing extra-territorial [illegible] since [illegible] prosecution hitherto been included in the policies for a flat $2 fee. This has been raised to $3, according to Attorney Dowse.

Second Deputy Insurance Commissioner Cogswell, in charge of the insurance commissioner's office today, declared that the rate boost was "all news" to his office. He pointed out that the Massachusetts commission has no power to regulate extra-territorial policies.

FEEL IT ESSENTIAL

The extra-territorial clause is not obligatory under Massachusetts law with compulsory policies, it was explained.

ACCUSED BY GIRLS, GETS 30 YEARS

Farrell Must Serve 15 on Each Assault Charge, the Judge Rules

Joseph A. Farrell, Newton auto salesman and former Watch and Ward agent, in Middlesex Superior Court today was sentenced to 30 to 40 years in State Prison after being convicted of attacking two women.

Farrell was found guilty by Judge Frederick W. Fosdick in the [illegible]ved trial of brutally beating, [illegible]ing Miss Alice M. [illegible], a school teacher, and Miss Mary Parmanian, Back Bay cripple.

He was sentenced to 15 and 20 years on each case. On being taken from the courtroom he remarked: "I guess this puts me in for life."

Defense Atty. Hugh S. Boyd, asked if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, replied:

"I can only hope that the quality of mercy will not be too strained."

"There is no great danger of much of a strain in this case," rejoined Judge Fosdick.

Because of the nature of the testimony, Judge Fosdick ordered the trial held behind closed doors, only counsel, witnesses and newspapermen being allowed in the courtroom.

It is understood Tucker, Anthony & Co. and Eastman, Dillon & Co. will shortly make an offering of securities of a new holding company.

Wins Divorce From Wife of an Hour

Providence, Sept. 20—Because his wife preferred to live with her parents the marital life of Joseph Martin of Pawtucket lasted just one hour on June 12, 1919, Martin testified in the County Court today.

He was given a divorce from Gertrude Martin on the ground they had lived apart for 10 years.

Mrs. Mary Patterson of Providence sought a divorce from Albert Patterson on the same grounds. She said he lived with her only one week.

Ship Builder Admits Shearer Was Paid

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—A Senate investigating committee was told today by Clinton L. Bardo, president of the New York Ship Building Corporation, that three American ship building concerns entered into a verbal agreement to send William B. Shearer, naval propagandist, to the 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference.

Bardo sand an agreement was entered into in New York in March, 1927.

It provided, he added, that Shearer was to go to Geneva as "an observer and report proceedings and the trend of events and give such information as was not in the newspaper which would be of interest to the ship building companies."

INVITED BY HUNTER.

Bardo represented his company at the New York conference. He said he was invited to attend by a Mr. Hunter counsel of the American Shipbuilders.

Others at the conference, he continued, were F. P. Palen, vice-the charred and blackened condition of their bodies will make identification difficult.

Of the nine men who were killed, eight have been identified.

Some of the patrons of the establishment found their way to the roof of the rear section of the building and were carried down by firemen, or, becoming panicky, jumped to the ground. Many suffered broken legs.

The building is three stories high in the front and a two-story addition had been built on the rear. The main dining room occupied most of the second floor. The kitchen was on the first floor.

The fire came at the peak of the night's business. Patrons who had dropped in for a luncheon after the theater had just settled themselves to the enjoyment of the entertainment which was offered by the club when the dread cry of, "Fire," came.

DRAPERIES OF WAX

When the flames had been checked many of the dead were found in heaps near windows that had been boarded up to muffle the sound of midnight revelries. More bodies were found heaped up on a stairway landing. Still others died in attempts to leap from windows.

Most of the dead and injured were in a dance hall or in dining-rooms on the second floor. The dance hall was decorated with flimsy draperies and paintermachs effects. Even the fire escape exits were drapery-covered.

Most of the draperies were wax coated to give them a lustrous effect. When the flames first swirled upward from somewhere in the basement the waxed drapes burned like tissue paper. Within a few minutes of the club was an inferno.

John Duval Dodge, automobile scion and two companions were passing the club when they heard the groans of the dying, the screams of panic-stricken men and women and the sharp crackle of the flames. Dodge jumped from his car and fought his way into the downstairs corridor. With his companions, Thomas Pendleton and Jack Carney, Dodge was confronted with saving nine women and three men.

According to eyewitnesses, the orchestra was playing a final encore preparatory to closing when the fire started. At first there was only a thin wisp of smoke near the floor and in the corridor leading to the front exit; then came a great billow of flame that doomed the building.

BATTLE TO FLEE TRAP.

Panic followed at once.

The musicians dropped their instruments. The rendesvous of gayety and revelry was transformed in a trembling, wailing tray, filled with frantic, fear-crazed men and women fighting to escape.

Some battered at the doors until their hands were raw and broken, attempting to break the "glass" in windows that were not windows at all.

The draperies burned quickly. A few fought their way to fire escapes before the flames cut off their flight. Others made their way through the barriers of fire and smoke down the main corridor, only to die in the crush on the stairway.

Several were hurt in a 20-foot drop from a fire escape.

Police said employees of the place told them that for several days there had been a faint odor of scorched rubber, resembling the smell of burning wires in a short circuit.

Efforts to trace the source of the odor had been in vain.

POLICE SCOUT 'BOMB' THEORY

"Most of the witnesses say there was no definite sharp explosion, just a staccato crackling," one investigator said. "If there had been a 'real bomb' there would have been an explosion that could have been heard blocks away."

"A real bomb," it was explained, is a gasoline bomb.

Many of those who, in their terror, leaped from windows, suffered broken arms and legs. Ambulances, physicians and nurses, summoned from all over the city, gave what aid they could, but in many cases their efforts were in vain. Several victims died on their way to the hospitals.

In the panic that followed discovery of the blaze, all semblance of order and chivalry was forgotten in the struggle for human natured oft-mentioned first rule, self-preservation.

Men knocked down and trampled women, and men likewise went sprawling helpless to the floor as the terror-stricken crowd raced for the exists.

Clothing and hair became ignited from the flaming tinsel overhead and the shrieking revelers who went mad in their concerted rush to escape the swift-spreading flames.

Men in Panic as Cooler Heads Try to Save Women

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—Beatrice Heath, clerk in the check room of the Study Club, which burned here early today, taking a toll of 16 lives, and injuring more than 50 persons, said she saw the flames leap down the stairway, licking the decorations. At the same time she heard screams and the pounding of feet in the dining room. She escaped through the main door, several men followed her out, she said.

The few men and women who got down the stairway before the flames cut off that means of escape, became pains stricken at the doorway and fought and milled there for several minutes before police literally hurled them into the street.

George Buckingham, of Flint, Mich., who with a party of five friends went to the cabaret about midnight, told of hearing the cry of fire and seeing the flames at the stairway blocking the way.

Al Handler, leader of the orchestra, was one of the first to reach the only open window. He helped several women through, dropping them to the alley. Then a sudden rush of men carried him through and he fell to the pavement, fracturing his foot.

Ship Builder Admits Shearer Was Hired

president of the Newport News Shipbuilding Corporation; S. W. Wakeman, vice-president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation; Shearer and Hunter.

He said Shearer asked to be paid $25,000, to be split equally among the three companies. He added his company paid Shearer forthwith.

Among those present was Shearer, self-styled big navy advocate, whose suit against three ship-building companies started the investigation.

Although Shearer is expected to take the witness stand during the inquiry, he was not called for today.

"I am saving this seat for my attorney and he will do all the talking for me," Shearer said.

TELLS OF CONTRACTS

Bardo had with him photostats of the government contracts with his concern and upon the committee's request produced them.

One of the contracts—that for the Cruiser Salt Lake City—was taken over from the Cramp Ship & Engine Co. of Philadelphia, Bardo said. The Salt Lake City contract was let in July, 1926—a year before the Geneva parley, his company taking it over in April, 1927.

The contract for the cruiser Pensacola was let in April, 1927, Bardo said, two months before the Geneva conference.

Senator Shortridge asked Bardo at what time he learned of the prospective Geneva conference. Bardo said he read about it in the newspapers.

"You took an interest in that conference?"

"Not particularly," Bardo replied, "because I wasn't in the shipbuilding just then. I don't think our directors ever discussed it."

Bardo said the contracts with the government had a clause permitting cancellation at any time. He said he knew nothing about the League of Nations, preparatory limitations conference of 1926.

FOUND SHEARER SMART

Bardo said the shipbuilders met with Shearer for about 10 minutes, adding:

"Shearer proceeded to say in his own way that he had long been interested in the question of sea power."

Shortridge interrupted to ask about the agreement. Replying a Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, Bardo said Shearer was employed by his company also in December, 1926, "in regard to the merchant marine."

At the time of the 1927 conference with Shearer, the New York Shipbuilding Co. was about to take over two government contracts for cruisers—since undertaken. Bardo said that prior to the 1927 meeting with Shearer he did not knew the purpose of the meeting.

"We wanted to find out reliably," he went on, "what the cruiser contracts, then before us, would do for the shipbuilding industry. We wanted to see what we could do to put the industry on its feet."

Robinson asked what Shearer said about sea power.

"He made an impression on me by the knowledge he apparently possessed," Bardo answered. "He said he had many acquaintances of a strong business character and he wanted to go to Geneva."

"Did he make any representations about the present strength of the American Navy?" pursued Robinson.

"He did not."

HE DIDN'T PROTEST

"What was the purpose of the conference—to determine if anything could be done to promote the shipbuilding industry?"

"Not that broad," Bardo replied. "We were in a bad way and it was of interest to us to know if the Geneva conference was going to destroy a building program."

Robinson asked why the $25,000 price had been determined.

"It was much," said Bardo.

"Did you protest?" continued Robinson.

"No. I was influenced by the other shipbuilders. I think Mr. Palen set the price. I made the comment that it was too much, but I didn't protest."

THOUGHT IT "BUNK"

Bardo said his secretary described Shearer's reports as "bunk" and that they were filed without consideration.

Several times he said he was not concerned about the number of ships involved in the Geneva conference.

Bardo's testimony then shifted to a discussion of the Transoceanic company, a subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation. He said the Transoceanic paid Shearer $7022 in connection with financing the company.

Shearer, he added, had made a trip to California to confer with William Randolph Hearst in connection with the proposed four-day liner project, but did not give more details. The reference to this transaction was prompted by the witness being asked if he knew of any other ship companies which had employed Shearer.

After a few more questions the committee recessed.

in detail, and both positively identified Farrell as the man who had taken them riding in his automobile to Weston and attacked them.

Atty. Boyd rested for the defense without putting Farrell on the witnes stand. In his summation he said the Gordon girl's case was evidence of assault and battery only.

Referring to Miss Farmanian, he said her story was vague and not of the simple, straightforward type of that told by Miss Gordon.

When Atty. Boyd concluded, Judge Fosdick said there was no doubt of the guilt of the defendant and found him guilty on both charges. Dist. Atty. Robert T. Bushnell then moved for immediate sentence. He said the case was different from the usual run, in that the victim might have been his sister or that of the court. He characterized Farrell as a degenerate of the worst type, who should be confined a long time for the protection of othtr girls, and because he was a menace to the public.

John and Florence Not to Go A-Flying

Hartford, Sept. 20 (AP)—Florence Trumbull and John Coolidge, who will be married Monday, are not going on an aerial honeymoon.

"Why, you know, John has never been up in a plane," Mrs. Trumbull said. "No, they are not going to fly on their honeymoon. That is very definite. It is her sister, Jean, rather than Florence who is taking most interest in flying now."

There were 13 guests at the Friday luncheon, bridge and miscellaneous shower held today in Miss Trumbull's honor. Her engagement ring is set with 13 diamonds.

3 Trapped Miners Are Rescued Alive

Wallace, Ida., Sept. 20—Three miners trapped in a tunnel of the Terrible Edith mine at Murray, were rescued alive.

A crew of men from the Hecla mine plunged through flames at the mine portal and grouped through swirling smoke until they reached the barricade behind which

LINDY PLANE IN CUBA ON LONG MAIL FLIGHT

Covers First Leg of 7000-Mile Trip to South America

Havana, Sept. 20 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh completed the first leg of his 7,000-mail inaugural flight from Miami, Fla., to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, landing here at 11:30 a. m. The colonel brought his Pan-American Airways plane safely down at Camp Columbia military flying field. There were seven passengers and a crew of three in addition to himself.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 19 (AP)—Inauguration of a 7000-mile air mail and passenger service for Pan-American airways over a West Indian route to Dutch Guiana and through the Central American countries lay before Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today as he pointed a tri-motored monoplane toward Santiago, Cuba.

Sixteen countries will be visited on the 20-day flight, similar to the good will trip he made a year and a half ago. He is accompanied by his wife and officials of the Pan-American Company.

Glenn H. Curtiss, pioneer aviation developer, was a passenger to Havana, the first stop on today's flight. Two newspaper correspondents will accompany the party to San Juan, Porto Rico.

A formal reception, devoid of ostentation, was arranged for the Lindberghs at the airport before the start.

SEES AIR'S NEEDS

In an interview before the start, Lindbergh expressed his views on aviation, and some of the developments that probably will be made.

"One of the big things aviation needs," he said, "is the development of more small planes which can be operated by the novice more easily than those of today. As it is now, a person learning to fly is compelled to spend too much time at the controls before he can handle a plane properly."

Lindbergh believes the auto-hydro has emerged from its stage of infancy and may prove a boon to aviation; and that the glider is taking a prominent part in the development of aeronautics. Oil burning or Diesel motors, if developed, he thinks, would go much toward making about more economical flying.

DOESN'T FEAR STORMS

Lindbergh said he did not believe the flying starting today would be particularly hazardous, despite the fact that this is the usual season for tropical disturbances in the Caribbean sea.

"With a multi-motored plane, capable of returning to its base from any possible serious disturbance, and reliable radio set aboard, I do not consider this flight a dangerous one," he said.

His itinerary today includes an hour's stop at Havana at 10:30 a. m., a 30-minute stop at Camaguey and an overnight stop at Santiago.

2 Americans Among 8 Injured in Riot

Manila, Sept. 20 (AP)—Eight persons, including two Americans and one Filipino, customs inspectors, and five Chinese were injured in a riot that began today when members of the Chinese crew of the British steamer Pamulaus tried to fight their way ashore.

The Chinese attacked the customs inspectors with knives and clubs. The riot was quelled when two companies of military police and civilian police reserves were called into action. The trouble started when the Chinese decided to show their resentment against an order preventing them from landing.

Lady Diana Takes a Turn for the Better

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—Anxiety over the condition of Lady Diana Duff Cooper, who became the mother of a son last Sunday, was lessened today, according to word from the London home of the famous English beauty and stage star. Yesterday it was feared complications had arisen, but a turn for the better occurred. Lady Diana has been married 15 years and this is her first child. Her husband is 39 and she is some years older.

Acquit Vermont Man on 10 Liquor Counts

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 20—After a short deliberation, the jury trying George Couture of Bromfield in United States District Court here on 10 counts of violation of the prohibition act found the man not guilty.

There remains against Couture another charge of 54 counts of violation of the prohibition act, which will not be disposed of at this term of court.

Widow Gets Quinn Estate

New York, Sept. 20—Emily Bradley Quinn, the widow, is named as executrix and sole beneficiary in the will of Edmond T. Quinn, noted sculptor, which was filed today for probate.

Hero in Fire

John Duval Dodge, heir to the automobile millions, was the outstanding hero in the Detroit night club disaster, where heroism was common. Dodge and two companions saved 12 lives.

DODGE SAVES DOZEN IN FIRE

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 20—John Duvall Dodge, heir to the Dodge millions, and two companions, rescued a dozen persons in the holocaust in the Study Club here.

Dodge, Tom Pendleton and Jack Carney were driving past the Study Club.

"We were permitted to drive through the fire lines," Dodge said. "And the three of us rescued nine girls and three men. Mounting ladders which firemen had set against the rear walls we broke through the mesh-protected windows and carried the unconscious victims to the ground.

VICTIMS SUFFOCATED

"The dead and injured were strewn over the dance floor. Fire had cut off their escape. Flames were still shooting out of the front of the building.

"The heat was terrific, but I doubt if any of the victims actually burned to death. They appeared to have been suffocated.

"I carried three girls and a man to safety. Pendleton rescued out three girls and Carney three girls and two men.

"The firemen were confused. Everyons was running around. No one seemed to think of calling them to take the victims to the hospital. Finally a fleet of cabs gathered at the scene and carried away the bodies.

"I was knocked down from a ladder by a misdirected stream of water. My companions and I were smoke-blackened and drenched with water when we brought our last burdens out of the building."

LEAP TO DEATH

Lyle Bisco, 26, cab driver, said he arrived at the scene with the first fire apparatus.

"You could hear people screaming blocks away," he declared. When I reached the front of the building I saw a man on the third floor waving a piece of white cloth. He shouted he couldn't get down and was pleading for someone to come up and get him.

"On the side and at the rear of the building people were jumping into nets. One man jumped, missed the net and struck his head on the pavement.

"One woman jumped out of the window. Most of her clothes had been torn off. I saw at least 10 people leap from windows.

Victims in Horror

Detroit, Sept. 20 (AP)—The list of dead in the fire which destroyed the Study Club, a night club, here today follows:

BRITAIN, JAPAN TO HAVE OWN NAVY PACT

Tokio Accepts London Invitation to a Parley Prior to Big 5 Meeting

Tokyo, Sept. 20 (INS)—Although official confirmation is not obtainable, it was learned from a usually reliable source today that the Japanese foreign office has received a formal invitation from the British government to open preliminary disarmament negotiations similar to the Anglo-American conversations prior to the convening of a five-power conference.

It was learned from the same source that the question was discussed at this morning's meeting of the cabinet at which it was decided to accept the invitation.

U. S. to Replace 53 Ships Temporarily, Then Junk Them

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Pointing to the eventual reduction of America's large preponderance over Great Britain in destroyer strength, the Navy Department has ordered 53 ships of this class withdrawn from the battle and scouting fleets.

They will be replaced with destroyers drawn from a reserve of 159 now tied up at San Diego and Philadelphia. But these, too, eventually will be decommissioned and the American and British navies, which now have respectively 262 and 184 ships of the class, will thus be brought closer to parity.

The 53 ships ordered decommissioned, like most of the others, were constructed during the World War. The Navy never regarded them as satisfactory, however, and after 10 years the engines and boilers have reached a point where repairs are considered uneconomical.

The ships at San Diego and Philadelphia, from which replacements will be drawn, have been tied up for about the same period. Navy experts, however, regard them as superior to those being retired, and they have been maintained in good condition.

France Seems Chary About Five-Power Naval Accord

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP)—Whipped into caustic wordage by developments on the subject of disarmament at the session of the assembly of the League, the French press today is virtually unanimous in affirming any arrangement between the United States, Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy can be merely preparatory and must be discussed as a basis of work by the entire preparatory disarmament commission created by the League.

Thus in France it would seem that to the accomplishment of the importance any Anglo-American naval accord should now be added further importance by extending the significance of even a five-power agreement for the limitation or reduction of navies.

NEW AUTO RATE BOOST OF $1

car owners feel the extra-territorial effect increased, since persons in it they are unprotected in event of accident outside Massachusetts or the Dominion, the public pays.

Automobile insurance, furnished by the State and paid for by a flat charge, and the present 2-cent gasoline tax, was advocated by Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley of Chelsea.

There would be no direct charge for the car owner's insurance policy, according to the plan which the Chelsea mayor submitted. The cost of the paying of damage claims and the administration of the fund would be supplied by motorists, nevertheless, on a pay-as-you-ride basis, Mayor Quigley asserted.

Under the plan, he said, the driver having the greatest number of hours on the road, constituting the greatest menace, would pay the most.

FUND OF $15,000,000

"It is obvious the State cannot morally, even though it may legally, compel one of its citizens to pay four times more than another citizen for an identical privilege, that of operating a motor vehicle on the highways," he said.

"It is even more obvious that the higher payment ought not to be exacted from a driver who has never with a perfect record and the lower payment permitted to the Windsor Park owner with a bad record."

Quigley said from figures furnished by the tax commissioner, it would appear that approximately 500,000,000 gallons of gasoline will be used this year, at the rate of 500 per car.

An additional tax of three cents a gallon, he figured, would produce an additional revenue of around $15,000,000. This amount, he said, would be ample to pay all legitimate claims and leave a sufficient amount for administering the fund.

Attorney John J. Cummings of Boston favored the incorporation of an insurance association to handle compulsory insurance which in reality, he said, would be a private company set up by the state. Under a state fund, he declared, the premium should be based upon experience rather than the flat rate proposed by Frank A. Goodwin.

Representative John W. Mase Leod of Chelsea laid the blame for soaring upon the insurance companies.

Death Parts Man and Wife in Club Horror

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 20 (AP)—A husband and wife visiting here from Montreal, Canada, were the principals in one of the numerous tragedies which resulted from the fire which swept the Study Club early today, taking a toll of 16 lives.

Alfred Snyder, of Montreal and his wife, Helen, were seated in the club when the flames quickly flared up and engulfed them.

Snyder, taken to receiving hospital with serious burns, asked police to try to find his wife, from whom he had become separated in the panic after the first red glare of the fire. She could be identified, he said, by a wrist watch bearing the initials "H. S."

Police going through the morgue soon found Mrs. Snyder's body.

2000 in Protest on 'Oil Farm' Project in Orient Heights

EAST BOSTON SEES PLAN AS PERIL

Veteran Woman Resident Turns in Petition Signed by Many Citizens

A petition bearing 2000 names was presented to the street commissioners today by opponents of the application for a permit to install a 90,000,000-gallon tank farm in East Boston.

Presentation was made by Mrs. Amelia Massa, a resident of East Boston for 44 years, at the resumed hearing in the City Council chamber at City Hall.

Ex-Representative Hanrahan read an order which he said he will have introduced at the next meeting of the City Council, asking them to take action to prevent the permit being granted.

Today's session, presided over by Chairman Thomas J. Hurley, was devoted to the presentation of evidence by the opposition, headed by President Timothy F. Donovan of the City Council, Congressman John J. Douglass and Vincent Brogna, former assistant U. S. attorney.

Register of Probate Arthur W. Sullivan of East Boston, called the attention of the commissioners that two Catholic churches, two parochial schools, an orphanage, and three or four Protestant churches in the district.

He said one of the claims made by the proponents was that the tank farm would bring industry to East Boston. "We don't want that kind of industry," said Register Sullivan. He added the farm would reduce the value of property and would constitute a menace to health and safety.

Asst. Dist. Atty William J. Sullivan said the plant would mean a constant night and day threat to 80,000 citizens. He said there was never any attempt to erect such plants in suburbs such as Newton and Brookline.

SUGGEST GOVERNOR'S ISLAND

The suggestion that the oil company go to Governor's Island was made by Representative William Hearn of East Boston.

Representatives Coffey and Barker registered their protests, as did Mrs. Catherine Corrigan of Orient Heights, who spoke of the objections of the mothers of the district. The farm, she said, would be a source of terror night and day.

Asst. Supt. of Schools M. J. Downey requested the commissioners to withhold decision until the Monday meeting of the school committee when he will obtain official opinion of the board on the matter.

Mrs. Caroline G. Murphy said no testimony offered by experts for the proponents could erase the fear of the farm from the minds of the people of the district.

CLUB IS OPPOSED.

A letter from the Progressive Club of East Boston, placing that organization on record as opposing the granting of the permit, was read by Congressman Douglass.

The first witness called by the opposition was Horatio Alden of the Maverick Manufacturing Co., cotton manufacturers, whose plant is adjacent to the proposed farm at Orient Heights.

He was cross-examined by Lowell A. Mayberry, counsel for the petitioner, but asked that Leston Carter, vice-president of the Boston Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance Co., who is also an engineer, be allowed to explain the opposition of his company.

Carter was then called to the stand and started to outline the reasons for the company's opposition to the tank farm.

President Timothy F. Donovan of the City Council, with Congressman John J. Douglass and Vincent Brogna, former assistant U. S. attorney, were present with many witnesses in behalf of the opposition.

The case for the petitioner has already been put in, various experts testifying as to fire hazards, engineering problems and so on.

The opposition started to put in its case yesterday afternoon, and the hearing broke into disorder when Mrs. Margaret Taylor Burns of Bayswater st., East Boston, questioned the right of Mrs. Anna B. Daley to speak for the Blackinton Community Club.

BIG FLOOD LOSS IN NOVA SCOTIA

Truro, N. S., Sept. 20 (AP)—Nova Scotia today was recovering from one of the worst floods in its history caused by a week of heavy rains.

Damage to crops was estimated at many thousands of dollars, highways were impassable and many farms were inundated.

Ten villages and towns in the Stewiacke Valley were without electric light and power as a result of the sweeping away of a dam.

The tracks of the Canadian National Railway were washed out at Grand Falls, 30 miles from Halifax, and trains were held up for hours. Farmers report heavy damage to grain and potato crops, and many of them were obliged to remove livestock from pastures in boats.

Lady Howard Kotows to Ishbel M'Donald

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—Cutting short a scanty vacation, Lady Isabella Howard will return from Bar Harbor, Me., Monday to prepare the proud old British embassy for the latest of its long line of official guests of highest eminence—Ramsay MacDonald and his daughter, Miss Ishbel.

Already servants have been at work, cleaning and making ready for the MacDonald visit. But the room in which Miss Ishbel will sleep during her stay and will make it especially comfortable for her.

She will plan the introduction to social Washington. She will consider the menus and the table appointments. She will choose appropriate flowers for the various rooms.

At the British embassy one question is how much honor can be heaped upon Miss Ishbel MacDonald. The daughter of the Prime Minister, sprung from a Scottish cottage and swept to eminence on the crest of the labor movement, will be accorded the highest possible rank by Lady Isabella, daughter of an earl and wife of the British ambassador to the United States.

In England wives and daughters of Cabinet members, including prime ministers, have no rank or precedence. Whatever social honors fall to them is through courtesy.

But in America, Ishbel MacDonald will be honored as the daughter of a prime minister come to visit a President in the interest of peace. The rigid rules of rank and the rules of simple courtesy will be made to bend wherever they might conflict.

ORDER PROBE IN DEATH MYSTERY

New Britain, Ct., Sept. 20—Police late today ordered an autopsy performed on the body of George Traynor, 23, attendant at the Newington sanitarium, who was found dead in the room of his sweetheart, Miss Blanche Kirklawski, 29, a governess at the Westminster school at Simsbury.

Medical Examiner John Turney had previously viewed the body and pronounced death due to heart disease.

Miss Kirklawski was arrested by Patrolman John Kranzet on a technical charge of breach of the peace.

The sudden death of Traynor is puzzling the police. According to the story told by the New Britain police, Miss Kirklawski, who has known Traynor for two months, met him and drove 20 miles in Traynor's automobile to this city. Miss Kirklawski, the police say, went to a rooming house on Main st., here, where she rented a room.

A short time later Miss Kirklawski ran out of the room into Main st., crying hysterically. She met Patrolman Kranzet and told him that her sweetheart had fainted. Kranzet called Dr. Joseph Matties, and Dr. Moses Kupulian, who, upon their arrival at the girl's room, pronounced Traynor dead.

Miss Kirklawski broke down at police headquarters and her condition was such that a physician was called. She told the police that she loved Traynor.

Mother Shot by 10-Year-Old Son

Portland, Me., Sept. 20—Mrs. Tessie Driggs of South Paris, was accidentally shot in the back today by her 10-year-old son, John, who was playing with a revolver owned by his grandfather, Elias Driggs.

The bullet entered Mrs. Driggs' back and penetrated a lung, but because of her religious beliefs she refused to have medical treatment. She is seriously injured.

Girls Flee Fire

Flag Winners Motor Over Holland Dykes

By FLOYD E. WILLIAMSON

Escort of the American Flag Champions Going Around the World as Guests of the Hearst Newspapers.

Amsterdam, Sept. 20—Flowers, airplanes and Rembrandt masterpieces occupied the attention of the four young flag champions as they motored over the dykes of Holland.

Arriving from Berlin they were met by J. J. Chabot head of the Holland-American Chamber of Commerce, who acted as official host during their stay.

The four young people saw diamonds cut and polished and visited the Queen's Palace, later going to the Rex Museum where they enjoyed contrasting the realism of the Dutch school with the imaginative Italian school which captured teir fancy in the galleries of Italy.

The champions are Robert L. Sullivan, Anna E. Groves, Mary S. McGonigal and Merle W. Clarke. They are winners of the United States Flag Association contest.

The group later saw mountains of flowers and the auction of blossoms and then watched them placed in airplanes to grace dinner tables in London, Paris and Berlin.

The champions will go by boat across the Zuder Zee to the quaint isle of Marken. Before leaving for Brussels they will visit The Hague.

The boys and girls are anxious to see their folks at home, yet express regret that their tour of the world is nearly over. They are looking forward to Brussels, Paris and London and are especially delighted to know that when they reach Paris Sunday night they will be entertained at the beautiful home of Genna Walska.

FAMED GIRL, 15, TRIES TO FLEE FROM POLICE

Barbara Follett, Daughter of Noted Boston Couple, Is Held

San Francisco, Sept. 20 (AP)—A 15-year-old girl who said she was Barbara Newhall Follett, child novelist of New Haven, Ct., who wrote "The House Without Windows" and daughter of Wilson Follett, a writer, was held at the detention home today at the request of juvenile authorities in Los Angeles.

The girl, well dressed and supplied with money, attempted to leap from a window in a downtown hotel when detectives called for her. She was registered as "K. Andrews."

Warren H. Prescott, Los Angeles probation officer, declined to explain why the girl had been detained.

She said she and her mother left home a year ago to travel to the Pacific coast by way of the West Indies and the Panama Canal. She said her mother now was in Honolulu and that she had written to her about her "plight."

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 20—Barbara Follette is a prodigy who has written two popular books and achieved fame as a violin player and scholar. She is the daughter of distinguished parents, both from Boston.

Two years ago, when 12 years old, she wrote a book, "The House Without Windows," which achieved wide vogue. It was compared with "Daisy Ashforth" and had a wide sale.

Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale and other literary authorities pronounced it remarkable.

A year ago she wrote and published "The Cruise of the Norman D." It told the story of a trip on a coastwise boat from New Haven to Nova Scotia and was pronounced a success.

She s ithe daughter of Wilson Follette, Boston writer, and contributor to magazines. His wife was formerly Helen Thomas, a Boston writer, and graduate of Wellesley College.

Miss Follette was regarded as a juvenile prodigy in studies.

COLDEST SEPT. 20 IN 54 YEARS

Today dawned as Boston's coldest September 20 in 54 years.

The mercury was 42 at 4 a. m. Only once before in the history of the weather bureau has so low a temperature been reached on t' is day of the month.

Sept. 20, 1875, had a minimum of 42, and there is no official record of a colder Sept. 20.

The wave of early autumn which was sweeping New England and the eastern United States today was scheduled to lose some of its bite by tonight, Boston forecasters, however, were reluctant to promise more than a slight increase in warmth.

A sharp northwest breeze was blowing across the city.

Reports from other cities of the Atlantic and east central states showed all this section of the country shivering. Charlotte, N. C., had a minimum of 44, the lowest the district ever experienced at this time of year. At New Haven, Conn., today, the mercury dropped to 40.

Concord had an official temperature of 37. It was 36 in Lexington. Burlington reported a ground reading of 30.

U. S. ARMS CUT PLEA MADE BY CANADIAN

Sir George Foster "Speaks for 160 Million North Americans" at League

Geneva, Sept. 20 (AP)—Sir George Foster of Canada, speaking as "a voice from the North American Continent," supported the British proposal for hastening a general disarmament conference in a vigorous speech before the armament, Sir George said, committee today.

The peoples of the United States and Canada, Sir George said, have revolted from the old idea of control by bureaucrats and dictators and insist that human life is of more importance than technicalities which stand in the way of limitation and disarmament.

A great change of sentiment has taken place in recent months among the 120,000,000 people in the United States regarding war and armament, Sir George said.

VOICE FOR 160 MILLION

"Are we giving sufficient attention to the sentiment of the people of that great nation which has almost infinite resources?" the Canadian asked. He added that in Canada 10,000,000 people have revolted from the idea that human beings can be used as pawns in settling international disputes.

Sir George pleaded earnestly that technical difficulties not be allowed to delay a movement for a general agreement or limitations and reductions. He expressed belief that he reflected fairly the sentiments of between 150,000,000 and 160,000,000 people representing "the not most backward folk on the globe."

Sir George's ardent appeal, which was received with much applause, was the climax of a rally of the smaller nations of Europe and those defeated in the World war to the support of the British proposal.

The three Scandinavian countries and Hungary and Austria ranged themselves with Great Britain and Germany in urging new instructions to the preparatory disarmament commission with a view to hastening the calling of a general disarmament conference.

POLES FOR FRANCE

Poland and Jugoslavia supported France in opposing the British move and urged that the present program of the preparatory commission be left undisturbed. They declared the Anglo-American naval discussions and the expected five-power naval conference should first be permitted to come to fruition.

Discussion of the three speeches was adjourned without reaching a vote. Chairman Benes announced that a number of other speakers and the question should be disposed of quickly tomorrow.

Announcement was made that M. Politis of Greece had a proposal for a compromise settlement of conflicting British and French attitudes.

LINK POPE AND KING'S VISIT

Vatican City, Sept. 20 (AP)—Belated announcement this afternoon that Pope Pius had accorded a lengthy audience to Monsignor Borgongini Duca, papal nuncio to Italy, and to Monsignor Megara, nuncio to Belgium, immediately afterward lent color to the hypothesis in diplomatic circles that the visit of Albert, king of the Belgians, was to lead the way to announcement of the engagement of his daughter, Princess Marie Jose to Crown Prince Umberto of Italy.

His Holiness subsequently received Count Dzvecki di Valsimon, Italian ambassador to the Holy See.

King Albert's Visit to Italy a Surprise

Rome, Sept. 20 (AP)—Reports that King Albert of Belgium is to visit Italy incognito to arrange that marriage of his daughter, Princess Marie Jose with Crown Prince Umberto of Italy came as a surprise to diplomatic circles in the Italian capital.

For years the possibility of such a wedding has been discussed. King Albert's sudden departure from Brussels yesterday for Italy revived old rumors, and the time is considered ripe in view of the reconciliation of Church and State by the Lateran treaties.

Prince Umberto is now 26 years old and an active, soldierly prince. Princess Maria Jose is 23.

It has been reported often that the Pope himself would perform the religious ceremony if they should marry. But this is consider ered premature and even highly unlikely at present. The Italian royal family has not yet taken its first formal sail at the Vatican, though it is expected to take it this autumn.

Urges More Funds for W. C. T. U. Work

Indianapolis, Sept. 20—Two new constructive policies, one looking toward establishment by State unions of reserve funds, and the other promoting the use of non-alcholic fruit juices in homes, were recommended by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the 55th annual convention here.

Mrs. Boole said the W. C. T. U. was unprepared financially to actively oppose those urging repeal of the Wisconsin prohibition enforcement act. She urged each state unit to maintain a reserve fund to be used on such occasions.

Cowbell for Gavel

Winning Dog Will Have the Most Fleas

Belle Plaine, Ia., Sept. 20 (INS)—The dog with the most fleas on his body promises to be the most popular canine at the annual dog show here. The association has offered a prize of $100 for any dog from four counties having the most fleas to the square inch.

Each dog will be microscopically examined and a clerk with an adding machine will see that each flea is tabulated.

GRILLS POLICE HEAD IN TRIAL OF PEACOX

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 20—Under the lash of relentless cross-examination, Capt. Michael J. Silverstein, acting chief of police of Mount Vernon, spent an uncomfortable session today in the trial of Albert Peacox for the murder of Peacox's wife Dorothy.

It was Silverstein who obtained the original confession from Peacox, 21-year-old radio technician, that he had slain his wife last April on the first anniversary of their wedding and six days later burned his body.

Defense Attorney Sydney A. Syme wrung an admission from Silverstein that the latter had omitted telling the jury on direct examination certain details of the confession that might save Peacox from the electric chair.

"I honestly failed to remember them," said Silverstein.

"Well, if you don't remember honestly, perhaps you failed to remember dishonestly." Syme shouted.

STAR WITNESS IN COURT

Frances Newman, former New York dance hall hostess, with whom Peacox was keeping company about the time of the slaying, appeared in court accompanied by a deputy sheriff. She is to be one of the state's star witnesses.

She was smartly attired in a blue coat, blue hat, gray blouse, short skirt and sheer stockings. She seemed somewhat bewildered.

The court room was packed with spectators, including many flappers. Peacox sat beside his mother, Mrs. Catherine Peacox, at defense counsel's table. He seemed refreshed as a result of yesterday's court holiday. He wrote many notes and passed them to his attorney as the cross-examination of Capt. Silverstein proceeded. The police captain was the first witness to take the stand today.

"After the body was found," Silverstein said, "Peacox confessed. We took him in an automobile and he showed us the restaurant where he got the milk bottle he bought the kerosene in.

"We then visited his apartment, where the killing occurred; the garage, where the kerosene was bought, and the woods, where the body was hidden. We found the defendant's shirt where he had thrown it away in a mud puddle because it was blood on it."

CALM AT EXHIBITS

The shirt was held up by Dist. Atty. Frank Coyne and identified by his witness. Peacox showed no emotion then nor when the black suede slippers his wife wore when killed and which he stripped from her feet were passed around.

The pistol with which he admits he struck his wife on the head was identified as was clothing he took from his dead wife's body and threw about the countryside, later taking officers to the hiding places.

Silverstein said Peacox told him he had taken the clothing to practice the best means of destroying by fire. He sprinkled gasoline on them and set them afire, deciding as a result to use kerosene to destroy the body itself.

Defense Attorney Sydney A. Syme cross-examined Silverstein.

Q—Did you leave anything out of what you told the jury about this confession? A—Well—

Q—Yes or no. A—Yes.

Q—Why? A—Honestly, I forgot.

Q—What was it you left out. A.—When I went to the apartment with Peacox I asked him why he did a thing like that and he said it was an accident, that he was panic-stricken.

Q—Don't you think that's a pretty important thing for this boy to be brought before the jury? A.—Yes.

Q—Why didn't you tell it then? A—I forgot.

OTHER OMISSIONS

Q—Did you leave anything else out that might help this boy? A.—I believe I did.

Q—What was it? A.—He told me his wife liked to go out nights and he was working nights so he couldn't take her; as a result she went with other men and this led to arguments.

Q—Did Peacox tell you he made an attempted to revive her after she had swooned, as you say? A.—No.

Q—Did he tell you about getting a wet cloth and putting it on her head? A.—He did not.

Silverstein was then reminded he had said that when Peacox took the body into the woods he tied a piece of cord around her neck "to be sure she was dead."

Q.—Where is that string? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Didn't you try to find it? A.—Yes, we did but could not.

Silverstein said Peacox had told him of finding Eugene Bussey, a Baltimore student, in the house on several occasions when they were living with Mrs. Peacox's mother. "He also said," Silverstein testified, "that when he separated from his wife she gave him back a ring and asked him to sell it to get money for a divorce."

"DIDN'T MEAN TO KILL"

Q.—What else did he tell you? A.—He told me he didn't mean to kill his wife, that it was just a family row.

Q.—And you forgot to tell the jury that? A.—Temporarily.

Q.—You know that intent to kill is necessary for a first degree murder conviction? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that if the jury believed what you say this boy told you it could not convict him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is that the reason you forgot to tell the jury about it?" A.—No.

Syme asked if any notes were taken of the original confession and Silverstein said there were not, but a written report was made on it about a week later.

Q.—Did you put in that report, that the boy told you he didn't mean to kill his wife? A.—I would not say yes and I wouldn't say no, got to tell the jury about it? A.—Yes.

A police lieutenant was dispatched to Mount Vernon for the report.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES

DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

THE game sensation that has swept America. The rules are simple. You are given, for instance, the word "tear" to unscramble with the letter "h." The Anagramble is "heart." Similarly to unscramble the word "link" with "s." The Anagramble is "slink." Remember, you cannot make an Anagramble with a plural—"links" would be wrong. You have to change the complete meaning of the word; "slink" is, therefore, correct. Nor can you make a different tense of a word. For instance, to unscramble "read" with "s" you cannot make it "reads." You must change the complete meaning. The Anagramble, therefore, is "dears."

Now try your hand at these Anagrambles:

(1) BLOAT—Unscramble it with an L.
(2) ABIDE—Unscramble it with an L.
(3) SIEVE—Unscramble it with a D.
(4) VIGIL—Unscramble it with an N.
(5) FOOLS—Unscramble it with an I.

Yesterday's Answers: 1—Deals with D is Addles. 2—Coast with C is Accost. 3—Calve with O is Alcove. 4—Barking with E is Breaking. 5—Nomad with I is Domain.

NOTED ARTIST SHOT DEAD BY MYSTERY MAN

Philadelphia, Sept. 20 (AP)—Frank Reed Whiteside, 63, a landscape artist of international fame, was slain by a mysterious gunman as he answered the doorbell of his quaint old two-story home at 1510 Waverly st. He was shot through the heart and died almost instantly. The bullet which ended his life was found lodged in the door jamb in the vestibule.

Robbery was given by the police today as a possible motive for the shooting. The artist's pockets were found turned inside out. His valuables gold watch and chain, however, are not been taken from his pocket.

Women neighbors told police they had seen a shabbily clad youth run down the quiet residential street in the heart of the city a moment after the shooting.

53 DESTROYERS TO BE LAID UP BY U. S. NAVY

Washington, Sept. 20—The Navy Department revealed that its recent order decommissioning destroyers of the battle and scouting fleets would extend to 53 ships.

The 11th and 12th Squadrons will be taken from the battle fleet and replaced by Squadrons 6 and 10, now out of commission at San Diego. The Decatur and the Litchfield, squadron leaders, will remain with the fleet.

Destroyer Squadron 9 and the experimental ship Converse, now with the scouting fleet, will be decommissioned at Philadelphia and replaced by Squadron 7.

The navy recently announced that because of unsatisfactory boilers and engines, a large proportion of the destroyers of the Fore River class would be decommissioned in the near future, with the eventual intention of their being placed on the disposal list.

The navy has 57 of these ships, all built during the war.

BRIDE, 52, MAY FACE CHARGE OF PERJURY

Providence, Sept. 20—While police were seeking the whereabouts of Mrs. Emma Sibley Simmons, 52, who married her step-son last December, Judge A. A. Capotosto today ordered Attorney Arthur Levy, counsel for Thomas Simmons, the woman's 21-year-old husband, to communicate with District Attorney William C. Crossley of Bristol County, Massachusetts, and prefer charges of perjury against her.

The couple were married in Rehoboth, Mass. Since then young Simmons has regretted his move and seeks divorce.

Today's investigation brought out further developments. It was learned that the young man's sister, Hazel, 20, married a son of her stepmother's named Adams.

Young Simmons said today that his own mother died when he was only ten years old. His father, Almond A. Simmons, married the stepmother in 1921. He died a year later when Thomas Simmons was 13 years old.

Since then, Mrs. Simmons has been very kind to him, Simmons declared. She said she wanted to keep the family together. Three or four years ago they moved from the outskirts into this city so that Simmons could obtain employment.

After moving into the city Mrs. Simmons on their marriage, he said,

They lived together until last June when Simmons said he was convinced he had contracted a wrong alliance. He does not know where his step-mother-wife is at the present time, although he has been paying her $10 a week up until a week ago.

It will be charged that when the couple were married in Rehoboth, Mrs. Simmons said she was 35 years old, when she actually is 52, and that she said her marriage to her step-son would be her second when in reality it was her fifth.

TRIAL IS ENDED BY JAIL BREAK

Marion, N. C., Sept. 20 (AP)—The trial of Alfred Hoffman, South [illegible] of the United Textile Workers, and five associates, charged with inciting a rebellion [illegible] was declared a mistrial today after it was discovered that J. Hugh Hall, one of the defendants, had sawed his way out of the jail and had escaped.

On learning of the jail delivery, Judge John H. Harwood of Bryson City, presiding, announced the trial could not continue because Hall and other defendants were under joint indictment. He said he would notify Governor O. Max Gardner and ask for a special term in which to try the men.

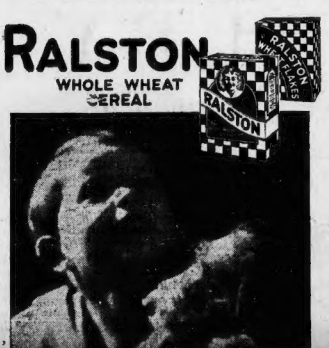
RALSTON WHOLE WHEAT CEREAL



PAST OFFICERS CLUB FOUNDED BY CLUBWOMEN

A Past Presidents' Club of the Second District, of which Mrs. J. Herbert Libby of Weymouth is president, has been organized, it was announced at the Second District Conference at North Scituate by Mrs. George E. Gomley, district director for the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Only retired executives of the thirty clubs which comprise the district are eligible for membership into this club innovation of the South Shore section of the state.

The first meeting will be held Sept. 30 at Camp Clif, in the Merrymount section of Quincy, Mrs. Libby reported to the conference. At that time definite plans and by-laws of the newly formed club will be submitted to the body.

Other officers are Mrs. A. S. Morvill of the Philergian Club, vice-president; Mrs. A. R. Taylor of the Old Colony Club, recording secretary; Mrs. Shirley R. Gross of Marshfield, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. S. Percel of the Squantum Women's Club, treasurer. The six directors are: Mrs. Bristol of Cohasset; Mrs. Somers of North Scituate; Mrs. Schrigley of Hingham; Mrs. Homer of Quincy and Mrs. George Jenkins of Whitman.

CLUB PROBLEMS DISCUSSED

Announcement of the new club featured the morning session of the second district conference, the opening meeting of the club season for these constituents of the great state federation.

Presided over by Mrs. Gomley, the session was for the most part devoted to discussion of club problems. Membership was stressed as the major concern of most of the clubs. While in some clubs the membership is limited club presidents in other cases favored unlimited roll call numbers. The question of a membership drive was discredited by a majority since most of the clubwomen felt it undignified to solicit membership in so noble an organization as a women's club, expressing their defence along lines of great desire and eagerness with which non-members should look upon membership in federated clubs.

Mr. Thomas J. Walker, of Whitinsville, third vice-president of the state federation, one of the guests, stated that the federation pin should be worn as a badge; not as an ornament, in keeping with its deservant dignity.

Because it was necessary to be present at the annual meeting of the Maine State federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, first vice-president of the general federation, was unable to attend this conference, although she had accepted an invitation some time ago. A letter expressing her deep regret and disappointment was read. In it Mrs Poole asked the clubwomen to consider most seriously the matter of the federation foundation fund, about which I wrote yesterday, and the Federation News. She urged one hundred per cent subscription for every club, and asked the club ladies to watch for interesting features in next month's issue.

Mrs. Ernest E. Dewyer, president of the Brockton Woman's Club, an organization with a membership of 1200, urged clubwomen to attend the fall meeting of the state federation which is to take place in Brockton October 25. The sessions will be held in the Brockton Theatre.

The hostess club, the North Scituate Welfare League, of which Miss Madeleine Kent is president, had charge of the conference, receiving the guests of the day, among whom were Mrs. William J. MacDonald, sixth district director; Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, past state federation president, and now active at work with Mrs. Henry Peabody's state committee on law enforcement, and Mrs. Charles L. Fuller of Brockton, assistant clerk for the State Federation.

MANY DELEGATES ATEND

The district clubs were represented as follows: Abington, Mrs. R. Stanley Arnold; Atlantic Women's Club, Mrs. Collis Lovely; Braintree Point Women's Club, Mrs. Harry M. Harmon; Braintree Philergians, Mrs. Herbert F. French; Bridgewater Manequin Club, Mrs. Harold D. Hunt; Brockton Women's Club, Mrs. Ernest E. Dewyer; Cohasset Women's Club, Miss Charlotte S. EVIDENCE GIVEN IN PANTAGES CASE VARIES

Los Angeles, Sept. 20—Three rebuttal witnesses called by the State directly contradicted statements made by two defense witnesses in the trial of Mrs. Lois Pantages, who is charged with second degree murder.

The crowded courtroom became astir with excitement as testimony was given that one defense witness had been promised "some dough" for carrying an offer of his aid to Alexander Pantages, millionaire husband of the defendant.

Jack Tellin, advertising man, was called by Chief Prosecutor James P. Costello to contribute his contention that John Conterno, a defense witness, had not testified in the trial consistently with a pretrial statement he had made in the district attorney's office.

Tellin testified that Conterno had told him he could "make some dough" if he would make an appointment with Pantages for him.

"Conterno told me to tell Pantages that he could do some good for him," Tellin stated.

The testimony of another defense witness, Mrs. Catherine Mulcahy, who had stated that a few minutes after the accident Mrs. Pantages was not intoxicated, was discredited by two State rebuttal witnesses. They were the district attorney's investigators, Jack Chriss and Jesse Winn, who said Mrs. Mulcahy had told them she had been within a few inches of Mrs. Pantages' face and that "she was drunk."

Pilot Injured in Tokio Plane Crash

Burbank, Cal., Sept. 20—Lieut. Herbert J. Fahy, test pilot, was in a hospital with serious injuries, and the second specifically constructed monoplane built for Lieut. Harold Bromley's Tacoma to Tokio trans-Pacific flight was in ruins as a result of a crash in a trial flight.

Fahy suffered a fractured arm, gashes on the face, and a possible skull fracture.

Man Burned by Lamp Explosion

Following an explosion today of a carbide lamp with which he was working at his home, Peter Kennedy, single, 26, of Prescott pl., Roxbury, was seriously burned about the head and face.

At the City Hospital, where he was taken in a police ambulance, his condition was reported as critical.

According to the police, Kennedy was using the lamp while working in the basement of his home. In some unknown manner a spark caused an explosion.

Travel Coats That Know Their Way About $29.75

Whether your coat is off on a world cruise or staying at home to do all its traveling around town in taxis is probably a matter of circumstance. But whether these coats will look the part at home or abroad does not depend on circumstance. For their tweeds are in the right rough blurry finishes, in the fashionable fall colorings, browns, blues, grays, they are in the smartest styles, belted or unbelted, with large flattering collars of fox, wolf, beaver. Sizes 14 to 46.

Inexpensive Coat Department—Second Floor

Your Fall Hat Must Mold! $5

It must fit the head as if it had always been a part of it, except, perhaps, for a dashing diagonal side as the hat we sketch at $5, that were it not for its color and texture you can hardly tell where the hat begins and the head leaves off.

Millinery Department—Second Floor

R. H. WHITE Company

Every member of the family will find fashions made less expensive SATURDAY in WHITE'S THRIFT BASEMENT

$4.95 for good looking Fall shoes

The first style sketched above is a youthful shoe in black kid and suede, $4.95. The second is in blue, black, or brown kid with simulated reptile, $4.95. The third is patent leather with simulated reptile, $4.95. These only begin to tell the story of fashion in shoes made less expensive by White's Thrift Basement.

93c for well made cotton dresses

A great many of these dresses are the kind that were being worn for sports and street last Summer, and we think they will be worn again next Summer. But at this amazing price of 93c, you may wear them as house dresses, even though they seem almost too attractive.

The materials are fine, and the workmanship is excellent. There are printed cotton gabardines, plain color cotton piques, printed wide wale piques, printed broadcloths, and plain color linenes. Most of them are sleeveless, some have sleeves. There are sizes 16, 18, and 38 to 50, 93c.

$1.89 for R&G corselettes

One style has a swami top, elastic side gores, and a wide inner belt. Another is all brocade, with inner belt and diaphragm support. It is well boned and has elastic gores at the hips. Corsets are more important, now that dresses are beginning to reveal the contour of your figure—and White's Thrift Basement makes it inexpensive to have R. & G. corselettes, sizes 38 to 48, $1.89.

39c for costume jewelry

Not what you paid, but how attractively it harmonizes with the rest of your clothes—that is the test of costume jewelry. So White's Thrift Basement makes fashionable jewelry very inexpensive—39c for chokers and pins like those sketched—39c for lavalieres, bracelets, earrings, and beads. A mixed assortment, so you may select what strikes your fancy knowing you are not likely to see its twin, 39c.

$1.94 for girls' dresses made of "Fruit of the Loom"

This cotton wears well, washes beautifully, and is printed in very attractive small flower designs. Straight line, belted dresses, or ensembles, sizes 7 to 14, $1.94.

$2.95 for girls' shoes

The style sketched is particularly attractive because it carries out the theme of a Fall fashion in women's walking oxfords—but does not lose the broad toe, flat sole, and other features necessary to fit growing feet, $2.95.

99c for boys' lined knickers

These comprise a large assortment of grey and brown mixtures, full cut, fully lined, and serviceable, sizes 6 to 16, 99c.

$2.95 for boys' shoes

Boys like their shoes when they look "grown up." Mothers want shoes to be durable, comfortable and properly fitted. These shoes fill both requirements. The style sketched is a brown oxford with Goodyear welt stitching and rubber heels. $2.95.

HUB AIRMEN TO PAY TALLMAN RARE HONOR

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The finest tribute that could be paid to Henry H. "Hank" Tallman, whose life was snuffed out when his plane crashed on a Connecticut hill and the first time of such a tribute in Boston by so many planes will be given today at the hour of Tallman's funeral at his Ridgewood, N. J., home, when every available plane at the Boston Airport will fly in battle formation over Boston, and drop flowers on the Postoffice building.

The planes and their pilots will represent the 3000 or more hours that "Hankis Pankis" spent in the air, the postoffice will represent Uncle Sam's air mail, which Hank carried for almost nine months.

Tallman's fellow air mail pilot, Frank C. Crowley, will lead the formation with a Pitcairn supermailwing, sister ship of Tallman's plane and will have black streamers tied to the interplane struts.

There will be at least 13 other ships besides Crowley's in the line. Tom Croce and Val Chick will be in their Challengers; Skyways will have at least six planes, piloted by Crocker Snow, Charlie Emerson, Jack Langley, Swede Parker, Al Libby and Hank Carter; Curtiss will place a Condor, flown by Joe Barber and a Fledgling, with Leo Desrosiers at the controls; Ted Kenyon and Mrs. Teddy in their Arrow Sport; Carey Pridham in his Arrow Sport; and possibly a tri-motored Ford of the Colonial New York-Boston line and others.

It was announced that Carey T. Pridham, pilot on the tri-motored Ford run to New York, has been appointed pilot on the air mail line to succeed Tallman. Pridham, a war time flier, will make his first run either tonight or tomorrow night.

Skyways has announced that they have sold Oscar Sewell's Whirlwind motored Stearman to Miss Mary H. Bacon, of Boston and Cape Cod, who is flying at Skyways' summer school, Marston's Mills. Miss Bacon has about seven hours' solo to her credit.

Sewell brought the Stearman from Keene, N. H., where he used it, and George G. "Scotty" Wilson, charter member of the "G. H. W." Club, followed him in his Waco Nine. It took Sewell 50 minutes to make the trip, but he climbed to 10,000 feet; Scotty required 62 minutes, flying at 3000 feet.

After the best summer for business he has ever had on Lake Winnipesaukee with his Travel Air cabin monoplane, and a Waco powered with a Whirlwind 35, both on pontoons, Bob Fogg arrived at the airport with the Travel Air. He picked up a passenger and took off for Teterboro Airport, N. J.

Bob said he was leaving for the Waco factory at Troy, O., to bring back a Whirlwind "7," 225 horsepower Waco. The ship, set on pontoons, will be used on the lake until it gets too cold, and then will be operated at Bob's airport in Concord.

Newspapermen, especially those who write aviation, were taken for plane rides in all the newest ships. Walter Rodgers' Davis V8 monoplane, flown by Guy Ham, was one of the planes used.

Powered with a Le Blond 60, she takes off and climbs right up to 700 feet the first minute, with pilot and passenger and full tanks of gas. Handles easily and has no tendency to spin, even at the slowest speeds. As a matter of fact, Guy has tried to get the little bus into a spin, but it has always refused.

Rodgers is head of the Walter S. Rodgers and Associates, and is New England distributor of the plane. At present his base is at Muller Field, Revere, and as soon as Fred Ames' East Coast Aircraft Sales Corporation's new hangar is finished at the Boston Airport, the headquarters will move to the new building.

Rodgers' home is in Falmouth, and he knows Bill Denny and Bob Townsend down there.

Boston women are getting to be so expert with airplanes that a mere man doesn't count any more. There's Lieut. "Dutch" Shankle's wife, the former Joan Fay, who is flying a Whirlwind Stearman like a veteran, Mrs. Teddy Kenyon, in her Arrow Sport, and Miss Olivia "Keet" Mathews in the Monocoupe.

Mrs. Kenyon went up to Beverly airport in Pridham's Arrow, and flew her own ship back. Harold Christensen went along to bring Carey's ship home. Mrs. Kenyon wound up her plane, warmed it up, and made a perfect take-off in a cross-wind. She came to the airport here, circled to wait for a couple of ships to clear the runway, and then landed with all the nonchalance of a veteran pilot.

Crocker Snow took Miss Mathews up in the Monocoupe, and after a couple of landings, turned the ship over to her.

THE QUESTION BOX, a former feature of this column, will again appear, beginning Saturday. All questions pertaining to aviation will be answered in this department. If we can't answer them we will find someone who can. Send 'em in.

ENGLAND MORE TEMPERATE

London, Sept. 20—Home Secretary Clynes' blue book just issued indicates that Britain under temperance as enforced by the regulation of the hours of sale, increased taxes on spirits and increased penalties for drunkenness, is growing rapidly more sober; there were 9325 fewer convictions for drunkenness last year than in 1927, or a total of 55,642.

The figures, which apply only to England and Wales, show that of the convictions 84 per cent were men and 16 per cent were women. The convictions among men were reduced 14 per cent and among women 16.7 per cent.

The number of persons convicted of driving automobiles while intoxicated was 1254, of whom only eight were women. The number of such convictions the year before was 1438.

ARABS JAILED AFTER RAIDS IN PALESTINE

Jerusalem, Sept. 20 (AP)—Trial of 37 Arabs of Tireh, near Haifa, in the district court, following their remand after attempting to raid the village of Bat Galim during recent Arab-Jewish disturbances, marks another step in the restoration of order in Palestine.

Sentences of imprisonment have been passed on a number of Arabs for their part in the recent troubles. Three found guilty of possessing loaded firearms were sentenced to one year each in prison by a Jerusalem magistrate, who in rendering judgment emphasized that severe punishment is due for the possession of firearms during the disturbances.

Three other Arabs, found guilty of robbery during the rioting at Haifa, were sentenced to two years imprisonment each. When two of the prisoners pleaded they were foreign subjects the judge directed their deportation, after serving sentence.

New assurances of peace are seen in the arrival of 300 recently recruited British constables, the majority of whom are former soldiers of British guards regiments.

Instances of Arab good will, even during the height of the racial and religious outbreaks continue to be reported. Jewish refugees from Gaza praise Hajsaid Elshawa, an Arab leader there, for defending Jews in the time of danger. Refugees who returned to Gaza report they found property intact.

Women, Children in Creek Escape Fires

Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 20 (AP)—A story of how women and children in the Dole Mountain Valley were drenched in Creeks and then wrapped with water soaked gunny sacks to save their lives from the forest fire which swept the district destroying a dozen homes was told by Deputy Sheriff Cliff Kemp and Deputy Auditor C. A. Calander upon their return from the devasted area.

Dole Mountain Valley, a picturesque community without thoroughfares except sock-strewn paths worn by the tread of ancient motor cars and horses, lies at the extreme tip of the Yacolt (Wash.) country where the fire which threatened Yacolt, started roaring on a sixteen-mile front recently.

Kemp and Calander said entire herds of cattle were burned to a crisp, cremated pigs, goats and chicken littered the by-path and scores of settlers barely escaped the flames, fighting their way to safety with severe burns, injured eyes and smoke congested lungs.

The Weather

For Boston and Vicinity—Fair, with slowly rising temperature tonight and Saturday; light variable winds, mostly northeast.

For Southern New England—Fair and not quite so cool tonight and Saturday; moderate northeast winds.

For Northern New England—Fair tonight and Saturday; not quite so cool Saturday and in New Hampshire and Vermont tonight; probably light frost tonight; gentle northerly winds, becoming variable.

For Eastern New York—Fair and not quite so cool tonight and Saturday; moderate northeast winds.

HEAVY FORECAST.

Steamers departing today for European ports will have fresh north and northeast winds and partly overcast weather to the Grand Banks.

R. S. Weston Leads Water Works Society

Portland, Sept 20 (AP)—Election of Robert S. Weston, consulting engineer of Boston, as president, was announced today at the concluding session of the New England Water Works Association. He succeeds Arthur D. Weston, also of Boston.

Vice-presidents elected were George H. Finneran, superintendent of Boston water works, and George C. Brehm, city engineer and director of public works, Waltham, Mass.

Girl, Three Men on Gas Station "Foray"

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 20 (AP)—Three New Jersey men and an 18-year-old New Jersey girl were arrested today on the start of what one of the trio admitted was to be a foray into Connecticut with the plan of holding up gas stations or stores as opportunity offered. Each of the men had a fully loaded automatic.

They are charged with carrying concealed weapons and the girl is held on a technical charge of breach of the peace.

Truck Is Struck by Aleppo Special

Danielson, Sept. 20 (AP)—A special train carrying nobles of Aleppo Temple, A. A. O. M. S., at Boston, and other New England temples, struck a truck at the crossing of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad here today.

The driver, Louis D Gleckman of Providence, was hurt, not seriously.

Langley Field Pilot Dies in Plane Fall

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 20—Capt. Charles Palmer Clark was killed in a plane crash at Langley Field. He had been commander of the 19th Airship Squadron at Langley Field for three years. Piloting the plane was Maj. Henry J. S. Miller, who was unhurt.

They were returning from a cross-country flight and were approaching the field when they made a forced landing.

Former Baseball Star of Brown Dead

Philadelphia, Sept. 20 (AP)—Wilfred Ernest Kneeland, dean of Chestnut Hill Academy, is dead after a long illness.

Mr. Kneeland, who was 57, was married three weeks ago to Miss Marita Cushman of Norway, Me. He was graduated in 1895 from Brown University, where he played on the football team and was captain and catcher on the baseball team.

Myopia Hunters Out in Force After Fox

Young Folk Delighted With Chance to Follow Pack of Hounds

NOTHING THRILLS THE Myopia Hunt Club set like the sound of the huntsman's horn these crispy mornings and nothing calls their little folk to breakfast at dawn like the clank of the bit and spur. Fifteen young representatives of important houses rode to the hounds this morning with two score of their elders—and several of them were only 10 years old. Emily Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil W Rice of Wenham, was the youngest to venture forth to the chase. Her brother, Charles Rice, 2d, who hunted also, is 10. Masters Teddy Osgood, Harry Thorndike, Francis Sears, Jr., and Francis Wendell are learning the fine points of good horsemanship in the frequent fox hunts with the large Myopia pack in charge of Maj. James F. Appleton, M. F. H. Misses Marian McKan, Nancy Shaw, Anna Ayer, Anne Sortwell, Ruth Patton and Angelica Weldon were among the young girls who took the jumps like veterans as Sir Reynard fled over the rough countryside. Mrs. Robert Winthrop (Theodora Ayer), who came over from New York to spend the hunting season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, was among the "regulars" who hunt three times a week and find a memento of the hunt or a blue ribbon at a fall horse show the most precious award to be gained during the remainder of the season.

Dorothy Backus Isabel Seyburn Virginia Backus Edith Seyburn

Dorothy Backus, Isabel Seyburn, Virginia Backus and Edith Seyburn had wonderful times playing at Singing Beach, Manchester, with their dog pal, Jack. Dorothy and Virginia are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Standish Backus of Windycliff, and Isabel and Edith are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Wesson Seyburn.

MRS. LYON WEYBURN WAS delightfully surprised last evening with a novel birthday party staged by Mr. Weyburn and a group of her friends who arrived at Rockies, the Weyburn home at Prides Crossing, in costumes of the "gay '90s." Bepuffled ladies, wearing hats trimmed in the profuse flower and feather mode of 1890, arrived unannounced with escorts garbed in the same period clothing and proceeded to celebrate Mrs. Weyburn's birthday anniversary in the manner of the gay 90s, with much dancing and merrymaking. The guests gathered at the home of Mrs. John L. Comstock at Beverly Farms for dinner before the party. Mrs. Weyburn entertained a small party at dinner but was unprepared for the gay troop that descended upon her at 9 o'clock. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. John Clunie, Mr. and Mrs. Howland Seabury, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Walker, Gordon Means, Misses Susan B. and Anita Sturgis and Mrs. Marie Lee Frothingham.

MISS CHARLOTTE G. HOPKINS is to be presented to Boston society at a tea with dancing on November 21, at the Marlborough st. home of her mother, Mrs. James C. Hopkins. Mrs. Hopkins and her daughter plan to sail October 4 for Italy to attend the wedding of Miss Jocelyn de Blois Bush, whose engagement to the Marquis Fabrizio Catalano Gonzaga is of international interest, and was announced by Miss Bush's mother, Mrs. Henry Sturgis Bush, formerly of Chestnut Hill. Mrs. Hopkins is a sister of Mrs. Bush and is the godmother of Miss Jocelyn Bush, whose wedding will take place in Rome on October 21. Mrs. Hopkins will return home on November 2, in time to prepare for the smart coming-out party for her daughter.

A SPRING WEDDING DAY will be chosen by Miss Virginia Alvord Robinson of Rochester, N. Y., and Malcolm Dexter Haven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newhall Haven of Boston, whose engagement has been announced by Miss Robinson's mother, Mrs William J. Robinson. Another engagement just announced from Montclair, N. J., is of widespread interest here since the principals are both descendants of famous Colonial families. They are Miss Elizabeth St. John Webb and Oliver Hazard Perry Baldwin of East Orange, N. J., whose engagement was made known at a bridge luncheon at the home of the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Herbert St. John Webb, in Montclair. Miss Webb is a descendant of Roger Conant, Colonial governor of Massachusetts, and her fiance is the great-great-grandson of Comdr. Oliver Hazard Perry, famous in the War of 1812. No date has been set for their wedding.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH ADAMOWSKI of Cambridge and their daughter, Miss Helenka Adamowski, are at home after a summer spent in traveling through Europe. They spent most of their time in Poland, visiting Belgium en route. The National Exposition at Poznan, Poland, was visited and from there they went to Warsaw.

THE BRILLIANT DINNER-DANCE to be given this evening for Miss Helen Warren and Miss Mabel Bradley at beautiful Barberry Hill, Prides Crossing, will call out practically the entire debutante set now on the North Shore. These girls, daughters of Mrs. Samuel Dennis Warren, will be entertained at dinner with 60 of their set by their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Warren, who are giving the party in their honor. Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman of Hamilton are entertaining a group of the guests at dinner before the ball.

2 PLANES LOST IN FAR NORTH

The Pas, Man., Sept. 20 (AP)—Plans for an extensive search of the Northland were under way today for two large cabin airplanes in which five men were due to arrive several days ago at Athabasca, in Northern Alberta.

The party is believed to have been lost somewhere between Athabasca and Coronation Gulf in the Arctic Ocean. Lac La Ronge, Northern Saskatchewan base of the Dominion Explorers Company, is expected to be the starting point of the man hunt.

Members of the party are Colonel C. D. H. McAlpine, president of the Explorers Company; A. B. Roadway, pilot-geologist; Alex Reading, geologist, and Capt. J. MacMillan and C. A. Thompson, pilots.

DiCarlo Arrested, Costly Auto Seized

Lynn police today arrested Joseph DiCarlo, alleged bootlegger, for the sale of a pint of liquor, held him in $1000 bonds and seized his $3000 motor car.

Di Carlo, who lives in Tremont st., Lynn, has been in court before on liquor charges.

Sexual Reform is much interested in this.

The majority of human beings, however, are still interested in the fact that when the time comes they can die, in peace, and start again.

The Prince of Wales buys his first airplane, making his first flight as an owner, to see his father at Sandringham. It is a G. H. Gypsy Moth, price only $3800. The Prince would not buy anything not "pure British." The little moth makes 90 miles an hour, is painted bright red and blue, and carries a silver plate marked "H. R. H. The Prince of Wales."

The little machine, with an aluminum nose, is upholstered in scarlet leather, which can be inflated to avoid bumps.

The horse is following the red Indian. On October 1, the New York Evening Journal, that has used thousands of horses for delivery, closes its stable. Only motor trucks hereafter.

The Evening Journal, having for 30 years more than double the circulation of any other evening newspaper in New York, believed that it could do needed for frequent, short stops and starts at every corner. But no more horses. The motor can do everything.

William Robinson, British, registers the birth of his 30th child, only one set of twins among them. His first wife had 24 children, the second has had six. Needless to say, Mr. Robinson is proud of himself. Of the mothers, one is dead, and the other too busy to tell how she feels.

Pinchot's Yacht Nearly Run Down

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—The New York Times today says the yacht of Gifford Pinchot narrowly escaped being run down by a British steamer.

Mrs. Pinchot, writing to friends, said the yacht's engine broke down outside of Colon and although all lights were showing the British steamer bore down upon them. When only a short distance away, she said, the yacht's wireless operator got a warning message to the steamer which altered its course.

Textile Show at Hub Art Museum

The first large exhibition of the season at the Museum of Fine Arts is now open in the textile and print department, and includes some 200 original designs and "mises en cartes," acquired by the museum this summer, and as many textiles from the museum's collection.

An important loan of a number of embroidered costumes and smaller pieces of brocades and embroideries by M. A. Elsberg of New York adds greatly to the interest of the exhibition. Designs and textiles hang side by side and bear a close relationship to one another.

TARIFF THREAT FROM ITALY

Washington, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Italian ambassador in a memorandum transmitted to the Senate finance committee today said that "it was beyond dispute" the present tariff bill's rates would act to diminish seriously his nation's purchases of agricultural products and other raw materials from the United States.

Such a condition, the ambassador said, would lead eventually to a "weakening of the economic relations between the two countries.

Arab Desert Emperor Mobilized for War

Jerusalem, Sept. 20 (AP)—The autumn war season is about to begin the Arabian desert with Ibn Saud, King of the Hedjaz and Emperor of the Nejd, his camel corps, legions of well equipped fighters and some of his 13 sons ready to take to the deserts to corral the last of the sheiks holding out against his authority.

On his desert tours Ibn Saud transports his harem of 24 wives in two luxurious limousines built in England especially for the purpose. Once an exile at Koweit on the Persian gulf without an acre of the million square miles of the Arabian peninsula to his name, Ibn Saud now is almost the unquestioned ruler of the nomadic desert tribes of the Near East.

The present campaigns are a sequel to trouble that started two years ago when the British mandate government of Irak established a frontier force to prevent raids on the pastoral tribes of Irak. Desert tribes resented this interference. Some of them demanded Ibn Saud lead them in battle against Irak but he refused and the Mutair confederation rose against him.

N. E. TO ASK AID OF FARM BOARD

Loywll, Sept. 20 (AP)—Declaring New England must retain her agriculture, Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers today said this section should take steps to get any assistance available through the Federal Farm Board.

A meeting of agricultural experts will be held shortly to consider the situation, she said.

"As a result of my conference yesterday at Springfield with agricultural commissioners of the New England States and Mr. Harmon of the New England Council, it was agreed a meeting would be held in the immediate future to discuss what New England agriculture should ask of the farm board.

ROME CAPTURE CELEBRATED

Rome, Sept. 20—The 59th anniversary of the capture of Rome by Italian troops, putting an end to the old temporal power of the Papacy, will be celebrated today in much the same fashion as in the years before the signature of the Lateran treaties

To crown the commemoration of the entry of the troops of Victor Emmanuel II into Rome, thenceforth Capitol of United Italy, a military band will play on the Funcian Hill and Prince Boncompagni-Ludovisi will solemnly lay a laurel wreath of the tablet marking the breach in the Porta Pia walls where the Piedmontese troops crashed through.

'ILLUSION' IS FEATURE AT THE MET

Photoplay "Illusion"
Type .....Comedy Drama
Stars .. Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Nancy Carroll
Theater .....Metropolitan

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

TRUST Mr. Charles Rogers to play the matinee idol perfectly in his effort upon the fluttering feminine hearts in his audiences. He hasn't grown up, histrionically, as yet as one would hope for; perhaps the very boyishness of him is an asset. This may explain why the nickname "Buddy" doesn't seem to grate upon him. He is good looking; theres no denying that. Some folks are born that way; others, you know, somehow achieve good looks, and still others have the Apollo tor Venus) attributes thrust upon them. This last-named thing can be done by the movies; that's a fact. Director and cameraman can work marvels. But, Mr. Rogers has his looks by nature. In some of his films he has done mighty well; but, in "Illusion," at the Metropolitan, he seems to be letting the foil, gag world take care of itself as it rolls along while he nonchalantly enjoys himself. It is just possible he regarded his part as that kind of a role. Anyway, he leaves it to two young ladies, Misses Nancy Carroll and June Collyer, to convince you there is something serious even in an all-of-the-wispish subject as illusion.

IN this talkie (with singing) Mr. Rogers does lead a rather cruel life. Cruel for himself Though born in a circus, he is made to appear a social climber, and you begin to think he is quite a cad and a snob His acting never clinches a thought that there is manliness under the skin. Result: Mr. Rogers just traps along, seemingly content with his lot of owning two pretty ladies to love, albeit he seems but half heartedly interested even in the spooning.

THE little that Kay Francis does is well done. Regis Toomey is best of any of the actors. Miss Collyer comes through excellently, and her voice registers finely. She gets a touch of tenderness into a scene, where, alack and alas! Rogers shows up in sorrowful form. Miss Carroll is "good as in "The Dance of Life," is as much into her misunderstood affection—mingled with ask, as a matter of poetic justice, that she carries the dramatic thread clear through the story to end, without very much assistance from anybody else.

THE, with all shortcomings admitted, "Illusion" is going to entertain. It has music, it has splendid photography, it has settings, it has beauty—most of all it has Mr. Rogers. With him on the screen quite a large percentage of hearts will beat a little faster. Then there's good circus atmosphere in one scene.

* * *

MR. ROGERS could very well have omitted his singing without loss to the picture. He never at any time, really, reaches his stride in "The River of Romance." Perhaps he saw in the an opportunity to set on the top of the world with Cupid and let the world-a-day world go hang.

* * *

ON stage you get some real illusion stuff. This is in the newer Publix Revue, "Believe It or Not" Alex Keese and his Syncopators jazzily please; and the stars are the Great Leon, magician, who puzzles where Mr. Rogers in a similar film role had only wonder at his inspiration; Earl LaVere, who says it with an accordion; Mary and Bobby, tap dancers, and Frances Dewey, ingenue The electric Dave Rubinoff varies from the usual classical program by having his orchestra render musical comedy hits of this year. And Conductor Rubinoff beautifully performs on his violin

"Pointed Heels"

William Powell has shaken his Philo Vance character for the time being and has started work on "Pointed Heels," with Fay Wray, Helen Kane, Skeets Gallagher, Evelyn Holmes, Eugene Pallette and E. H. Calvert. The story is from the pen of Charles Brackett. Florence Ryerson adapted the story for the screen and John V. A. Weaver wrote the dialogue. The direction is in the hands of A. Edward Sutherland.

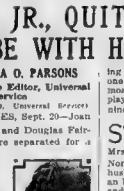
DOUG., JR., QUITS PLAY TO BE WITH HIS JOAN

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

(Copyright, 1929, Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20—Joan Crawford and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., were separated for a whole hour and a half at the Churchill luncheon. Doug told me it was their first luncheon separation. Joan chatted with Norma Shearer, while Doug contented himself with Polly Moran. He said that playing in the stage play, "The Youngest," meant too much separation from Joan and too much hard work, so he had decided to leave the cast. He might as well continue and be among those present, for the play threatens to be a success, and Joan is soon to start work.



Louella Parsons

Let me tell you about Joan. She has signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and from all accounts, it's a pippin. Her first picture under the new arrangement is "Montana," an all talkie, and Mal St. Clair is being borrowed to direct her. Harry Rapf is the supervising director, and he will soon announce Miss Crawford's supporting cast. Why not Doug, Jr. He did mighty well in "Our Modern Maidens"

REVIVALS, revivals, revivals. All our best talkies are reincarnations of silent pictures made sometime ago. There isn't a studio in Hollywood that isn't digging deep into the past to find a silent picture that can be resurrected in sound pictures. "The Miracle Man," we are told, which brought Thomas Meighan, Betty Compson and Lon Chaney instantaneous fame, and gave George Jean Tucker great credit as a director, is to be brought back, with Hal Skelly in the lead

Poor George Jean Tucker only lived a short time after "The Miracle Man," and he never made another success. Hal Skelly is now playing the rival which Wallace Reid made by Ford Sterling silent version. And her an interesting angle. Helene Chadwick, at one time one of screenland's most popular leading ladies, is playing one of the leading feminine roles opposite Mr. Skelly

SOMETIMES a case of mistaken identity is annoying Mrs Howard Hawks, a sister of Norma Shearer, is to present her husband, the Fox director, with an heir next month. Mrs. Hawks and Norma bear a strong family resemblance, and Hollywood has been busy gossiping that a young Thalberg is about to make its appearance. Not even Mark Twain's rumored death or any more unrise, Norma says, than the tale that she is to have a baby "I do not feel I can combine motherhood and a career," said Norma, "and when Irving and I have children I want to settle down and give them my undivided attention." So you may scratch the rumor off your calendar.

WELL how do you do? Here we are in the guise of Cupid. Could anything be more romantic? Mrs. Minnie F. Todd was married last week to Egbert Newton Wood of Denver, and she is now on her honeymoon. She attributes her marriage to this column. She hadn't heard from Mr. Wood for years until he read something about her activities as publicity director for Tiffany-Stahl in this column and immediately wrote to her. Result, a visit to Hollywood and a marriage, and now everybody is happy. Only Mrs Wood's friends are sorry she is moving to Denver and leaving a career for a role of domesticity.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Owen, the gateman at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, greeting all the celebrities at the luncheon in honor of Hon. Winston Churchill. Owen called it the best luncheon of the year. Marion Davies rushing to the luncheon at the last minute with her makeup and in the blue frock she wears in "Duley." Lawrence Tibbetts in his gypsy makeup, singing "The Road to Mandalay." Van and Schenck in their baseball costumes also arriving from the set at the last minute. William Haines applauding the guest of honor's speech with great enthusiasm. Irving Kolb driving with Los Angeles' friend. That's all today.. See you tomorrow!

'BLACK CROOK' MUSICALE AT APOLLO

TO the theatergoers of the nineties, "The Black Crook," which opens at the Shubert-Apollo Monday, is a musical comedy which calls to mind marching Amazons, dancing coryphees, magnificent scenery and gorgeous costumes. To those who remember back to the seventies, "The Black Crook" calls to mind the fierce denunciation of the piece as "immoral." It was the first leg show in America, the debut of bared limbs on the stage adorned only by flesh colored tights

And with "The Black Crook" the struggle for the emancipation of women's legs from "the traidom of skirts" began. But not until the revivals of this piece in the nineties were the old-fashioned prejudices sufficiently overcome to allow of the exhibition of feminine curves without protest in reputable theaters.

But "The Black Crook" and the bicycle were held responsible for this. With the bicycle women began to show themselves on the streets and in the parks with their "lower limbs" encased in close-fitting knickerbockers and stockings. Miss Georgia Parker, a popular vaudeville entertainer of the nineties, thus complained of the effect of the bicycle upon the stage:

"In 'The Black Crook' it was a rusty thing for a woman to come out in long skirts and show her legs even up to her knees; but now, well, if you don't fling your clothes around and kick high, your act don't go. Now, in the turn I have been doing this winter, I wear a red dress with at least half a dozen skirts, ranging in color from deep red of the inside ones to a very faint pink outside. I have red silk knickerbockers to match, and they are made so full and have so many ruffles that they are almost like divided skirts. Well, you'd think it would be enough if I lifted my skirts up to show all that when I dance, but really my friends tell me that I've got to make it more spicy if I don't want to be looked on as a back number.

"The people have had so much shown them that they don't pay any more attention to what used to be considered risque. The bicycle women are responsible for this jaded popular taste. When a man can go in Central Park and see a dozen pairs of well-shaped legs in tight-fitting knickerbockers for nothing, he won't pay to go to the theater unless he can see a great deal more."

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

EVEN without waiting for us to catch our breath, the booking men started in all over again ringing up new shows on their cash registers. And before they'd called it a day they had all of seven productions listed for the week beyond this on Broadway. Nor does that take into account a premiere over in Hoboken and the operations down at the Civic Repertory Theater in West Fourteenth st.

The latest of the lot to enter next week's lists is Elmer Rice's comedy, "See Naples and Die," a title that is intriguing the conversationalists along the street no end This piece originally was slated to open on Sept. 30, but yesterday Lewis Gensler got to worrying about all that delay and moved the presentation up to September 26. The Vanderbilt Theater will be the scene of all the excitement

The premiere will be further noteworthy in that it will take place without the usual out of town performance, a direct slap in the face of providential theatrical precedent. Well, well, what will that boy Kriz be up to next?

And Tom Van Dyck, the press prestidigitator of the Gilbert Miller offices, is terribly anxious that no one overlook, in the heat of all this disturbance, that his boss is bringing two new ones to town the week of September 30. Fat chance of overlooking 'em, say we, with Tom close to a telegraph office

But, anyhow, Gertrude Lawrence, in "Candlelight," at the Empire, and Otis Skinner, in "A Hundred Years Old," at the Lyceum, are the plays. Dont say I didn't warn you in plenty of time.

George White, too, is commanding a little attention here in view of the fact his "Scandals," due at the Apollo on Monday, will back his return to the so-called footlights after a haughty indifference of two years. During all that time George has been doing his acting in the box office.

White will have several numbers to perform in "Scandals" this year and I'll wager he didn't have any trouble in coming to terms with the producer about salary and billing.

Eva Puck and White Back in "Show Boat"

Eva Puck and Sammy White, who have just completed a successful engagement in vaudeville, have returned to the cast of Ziegfeld's "Show Boat."

"Four Feathers" at Five Publix Houses

"Four Feathers," hailed as one of the greatest of the year's motion pictures, is the main attraction for the week, starting tomorrow at five of the Publix theaters—Scollay Square, Fenway; Capitol, Commonwealth ave.; Central Square, Cambridge; and Strand, Dorchester.

This picture was produced by the "adventurer showmen," Ernest B. Schoedsack and Merian C. Cooper, from the famous novel by A. E. Mason, upon which the plot of the film is based. Cooper and Schoedsack were responsible for the remarkable adventure films "Chang" and "Grass," and they spent nearly two years in wildest Africa making "Four Feathers." The story itself deals largely with British soldier life in the Soudan and combines the romance and courage of "Beau Geste" with the thrills of "Chang"

The cast includes Richard Arlen, Fay Wray, William Powell, Clive Brook, Noah Beery, Theodor Von Eltz, George Fawcett, Noble Johnson and Phillipe DeLacy.

'SONNY' GETS HUB LETTER ON COAST

A LETTER dropped in a mail box in Chicago, bearing two words only, as an address, has been delivered. All that was written on the envelope was: "Davey Lee" No address, no city, state or studio.

It was sent directly to Warner Brothers studio in Hollywood where Davey Lee recently appeared in Jolson's new singing Vitaphone picture, "Say It With Songs," now at the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia. A week previous, another letter, mailed from Boston and addressed only to "Sonny Boy" was delivered to Davey's mother.

Such is fame. A year ago such letters would have gone to the dead letter office. There are probably a thousand David Lees, but following the showing of "The Singing Fool" there was only one David Lee and one "Sonny Boy" so far as the mail-sorter knew.

Davey does his finest screen work in "Say It With Songs"

Naked Cityite Off to Wilds as Proof He's Caveman's Equal

Editor to Be Entirely "On His Own" for the Next Ten Weeks

NAKED, defenseless, alone, Burt McConnell stepped back 10,000 years into the primeval forest yesterday.

For ten weeks, without sight or aid from any human being, McConnell will essay to live in the bush in wild country between the basins of the Matawini and Ashuapmouchouan rivers, north-west of Lake St. John, Quebec.

Through that country yesterday there swept the chill breezes of early fall, biting winds that sent natives about their stoves and made travelers bundle in heavy clothing.

But when McConnell, soft product of civilization, an intellectual and associate editor of the Literary Digest, reached the frontier of his wilderness home, District Forester Andrew McKibbin and a committee were there to see that he stripped to the cold wind and started on his venture with empty hands

He must fashion clothing to survive the rigors of fall in a Quebec forest. He must make moccasins to shield his tender feet. He must make weapons to kill moose, partridge, bears.

The only equipment he has consists of cameras and a typewriter and paper. From time to time District Forester McKibbin will go to a designated spot to pick up whatever articles Mr. McConnell has left there.

These will be published exclusively in the Boston Evening American and allied Hearst newspapers.

By BURT McCONNELL
Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

Normandin, Quebec, Sept. 20—I am ready to set out by canoe for a spot 50 miles northwest of Lake St. John, Quebec, to demonstrate that average city dwellers, such as myself, can, without fire, food, weapons or clothing, make his living in the friendly forests with the weapons of primitive man.

If I am successful, this experiment should prove that the spirit of adventure in the average man has not been obliterated by the artificial conditions under which we live, that we still retain some of the characteristics and instincts of our remote ancestors, that we have not grown soft through easy living.

Chief Forester Piche of Quebec has arranged for District Forester McKibbin to accompany me to a designated spot, to see that I do not smuggle into the wilderness anything that will enable me to make my living, such as matches, a knife, axe, clothing, and so forth, and to bring back my discarded garments and such luxuries as shaving cream and tooth paste.

WILL STORE CLOTHES

He will report to the committee here, store my belongings at the local hotel, and at the end of a week will return to the vicinity of my camp and take from a previously designated spot whatever chronicles of my adventure I may have written for the readers of this newspaper. Neither McKibbin nor anyone else will come in contact with me until I am ready to return to the United States on or about Thanksgiving Day.

So certain am I of success that I can confidently say, here and now, that the only reason for a premature return to civilization will be a shortage of game. So far as I can learn, there are few rabbits in the country northwest of Lake St. John, no deer, no marten, lynx or other small furred animals, and few beaver. There are no wolves, no geese, very few ducks, but numbers of partridge, trout and mouse.

There are also a few bear, but no large trees out of which to make a dugout canoe and moccasins and clothing from the inner bark. There is little or no flint from which to make arrow and spear heads, and no hickory or white oak for bows and arrows. On the whole the district has many disadvantages, but it is the best available that already is not overrun with members of hunting and fishing clubs.

That, incidentally, was one of the great disadvantages of New Brunswick. Aside from governmental opposition to the project, there were too many hunters, male and female, running around loose. Also Minister of Lands and Mines Richards apparently did not want any Diana to be shocked by the sight of a semi-nude man dashing through the dense underbrush in pursuit of a meal. As if I would have remained unclad, on a frosty September day in New Brunswick, a moment longer than it would have taken me to weave a night shirt of cedar bark!

I am going into a country where there is gold. Unfortunately however, it is not of the alluvial variety, so I cannot make a frying pan of a huge nugget, as the hero did in Arthur Stringer's novel. Most of my cooking will therefore be done over an open fire. Since I shall have no matches, the blaze must be kindled by a dowdrill made of a bent stick with a piece of spruce root for a string, a spindle of poplar, and a fire board of the same wood.

How I make my first fire and what fire means to a man alone in the wilderness, how I make my first pair of moccasins, my first knife, bow and arrow, and so forth will be told in the first article sent out through the courtesy of McKibbin. His subordinate has a dozen forest rangers, any one of whom he could assign to take me up the Washimeska river and bring out my articles once a week, but he prefers to do it himself. He is, in a way, jailer, guardian and friend.

If, on the appointed day, my measures are not found on the cache, he will start in search of me, on the assumption that I have had an accident such as woodsmen and hunters suffer at one time or another. I have already passed on to him one of the chief forester's cheerful observations—if a bear mauls you, or you break a leg, any river between the Peribonka and the Chamouchouan will bring you down to Lake St. John if you can make a raft.

TO MAKE MOCCASINS FIRST

This one-man expedition of mine is not without its hazard. No one-man expedition ever is. That was one reason for the governmental opposition in New Brunswick. Vilhjalmur Stefansson's third Arctic expedition, of which I was a member, furnished its hazardous moments, but on that journey over the great white desert we were equipped with binoculars and the best rifles, food, clothing, matches and other hunting and traveling paraphernalia that money could buy. Here in the Quebec woods I am starting from scratch.

True, I am taking cameras, but only in order that a pictorial history of the expedition may be made. Cameras really are impediments, particularly if a scarcity of game compels me to move to another site. The same holds true of writing materials, but they are necessary if I am to tell others of my adventures. Like mosquitoes, they are something we must put up with.

From the moment that I step ashore from McKibbin's canoe and discard my clothes, my work will be cut out for me. For the furred and feathered folk will spread the news that a new sort of animal has invaded their domain. Having the tender feet of the average man, my first need will be for a pair of moccasins.

The next necessity will be a fire. Then, in the order of their importance, come clothing, shelter, weapons and a hammock of woven bark and fiber. This I shall stretch about ten feet above the ground for the first night or two or until I experience a feeling of comparative security.

Primitive man slept in trees — and for the next ten weeks I shall be a primitive. I shall be under several handicaps that my remote forbears did not experience, for it will be necessary for me to obtain game without help, skin it, cook the meat, tan the skins, build my shelters, gather firewood, and make my own clothing, whereas Mrs. Caveman performed most of these duties for her spouse.

On the other hand, I can adapt a modern intellect to the solution of the cave-man's problems. It promises to be a great adventure, this blazing of the backward trail.

WINTER is just around the corner. You should be giving a thought to your Winter wardrobe NOW!

This season it is smart not only to be stylishly attired in a new fur creation, but also to be comfortably clothed in a warm, dependable fur coat. The many New England women who have selected the advance models during our August Fur Sale have been enthusiastic about the new style trend this season.

And naturally so,* for Scott Furriers have combed the markets of the world, assembling on our spacious floors the finest furs and the most fascinating styles. Each coat is a real work of art, a product of skilled craftsmanship and unceasing vigilance on the part of our buyers.

Growth--

From a very modest beginning several years ago, Scott Furriers have succeeded in winning the confidence of New England women through a very definite policy which has been the talk of the business world. Scott Furriers have made it possible for women throughout New England to own the fur coat they most desire by means of the easiest, fairest and most economical payment arrangement ever known.

The basis of this entire arrangement is confidence—confidence in the customer which has reflected the customer's confidence in Scott Furriers.

The Unique SCOTT Organization

The name "Scott" embraces a large organization of buyers, salespeople and expert furriers, trained in courtesy, efficiency and Scott fur knowledge, spreading Scott fame for fur dependability.

FOR instance, a woman may walk into Scott Furriers, select any fur coat priced from $95 to $975, or any fur scarf priced from $15 to $195, or a cloth coat from $16.50 and up to $195, make a small deposit and then arrange for further payments while wearing it. She may pay in one of three ways. She may want to pay cash; or she may open an extended charge account; or she may enroll in the Scott Unique Fur Club, registered, and the only one in New England.

As the name implies, this Club is certainly unique in the fact that it has exclusive features unlike those given by any other store.

Exclusive Features:

Open a charge account, pay cash, or make a small deposit and further payments while wearing your coat. No delay, investigation or inconvenience. No specified payments — pay when convenient. No compulsory amounts required. Pay by mail or in person. No one is referred to. No collectors to keep after you. If you have reverses, we wait until you CAN pay. Everything strictly confidential. Same exclusive advantages whether you buy a Scott fur coat, cloth coat or fur scarf.

Built on these features, the Scott Unique Fur Club has become famous throughout New England, and it has brought fur coat enjoyment to thousands of women who have never before been able to afford this luxury.

FUGITIVE HOLDUP MAN SLAIN AFTER ARREST

BOSTON DAY by DAY

By FRED TOYE

SECRET practice at Harvard is secret. If you don't believe it, try to get into the Stadium one of these afternoons when the Crimson squad of 120 huskies is being put through the paces. You'll see at least nine nervous attendants bearing down upon you from as many points of the compass. No one gets in except players and coaches. There are no privileged friends.

A NEW SPIRIT of cordiality has arisen between sporting writers and the Cambridge University in the past three or four years since William J. Bingham has been director of athletics at Harvard. One of his most gratifying moves has been the appointment of a former Boston newspaper man, Frank Ryan, to handle press relations.

In previous seasons, it was the custom each day at the close of practice for a student assistant manager to pass out alleged information to the newspaper men. The average student manager's idea of news was a list of the names of men assigned to the various squads for the day. Nowadays, reporters receive an intelligent resume of the day's workout, and other material of interest to the world at large, direct from an official who knows news and who knows sports.

ANOTHER gratifying improvement is the enclosed press box at the top of the Stadium. The open press section in old days was exposed to bone-piercing blasts of wind during the late fall afternoons. Now the scribes sit in comfort, and may relax from time to time under the benign influence of abundant hot coffee.

BINGHAM was one of the track's best half-milers during his school days at Exeter and later at Harvard. His appointment as director of athletics was followed shortly by drastic changes in the makeup of the Harvard Athletic Association staff. New business methods were instituted, and practically the entire handling of finances was transferred to the bursar of the college. Nowadays, the H. A. A. does not have a graduate treasurer, and the huge finances of Harvard sports are handled together with general university funds.

IF YOU WANT to be sure of making your million, join the navy. This is a tip-off by Commander L. J. Gulliver of the Boston naval recruiting station.

All an ambitious young chap needs these days is a willingness to work cheerfully, and a natural instinct not to lead with his right. Given these sterling qualities, and the background of a three-year hitch, and he's all set for glory, conquest and untold riches in the squared circle.

COMMANDER GULLIVER builds up an imposing list of ex navy men whose boxing careers have brought avalanches of shekels and showers of adulation, enough to satisfy the yearn-ings of a banker or a prima donna. Tunney, Greb, Finnegan, Buff, Schaaf and Sharkey have made their marks in more ways than one. You can't tell a gob that Squire Sharkey isn't going to be the next world heavyweight champ.

IS TRACED BY VICTIM TO ALBANY

Freed on Bail, He Is Shot While in the Basement of a Rooming House

As a result of the East Boston robbery of Mrs. Rosario Latona of $12,000 in August, Leonard Leone, 33, was shot to death in Albany, N. Y., today a few hours after being admitted to bail.

Sought for more than a month in connection with the robbery, Leone surrendered in Albany yesterday, was admitted to bail and was slain shortly after midnight.

Frank Rappazzo, said by police to have been a close associate of Leone, was arrested as he was running from the basement of a house where the latter was killed.

Chief of Police David Smurl said he was working on the theory that Leone was killed because he had failed to make an even division of the loot from the Latona robbery.

COUPLE ARRIVES

Mr. and Mrs. Latona came to East Boston from New York about July 31. They were reported to have sold a piece of property in New York city and to have received $22,000 for it, having $19,200 left after paying off a mortgage.

The next day, according to the police, Benjamin Mirible, 50, of Frankfort st., East Boston, appeared at the house with a man and woman and engaged living accommodations for them.

The following morning, August 3, while Mr. and Mrs. Latona were eating breakfast, two men, one of whom was identified as Mirible, stepped through the door with drawn pistols and ordered them to throw up their hands.

Police said one of the robbers extracted $18,805 from the dress of Mrs Latona and then relieved her husband of $400. After warning the Latonas they would be killed if they left the house inside eight hours, the bandits fled.

SHE TRAILED HIM

Mrs. Latona recognized the other man as a resident of Albany and with a friend who was visiting here, Miss Rose Di Frank, went to that city. She told police later a relative of one of the holdup men offered her $3000 to keep quiet.

On returning to East Boston she found her husband had disappeared and went to the police with her story.

Mirible's arrest followed, and police have been seeking Latona, Leone and a third man.

Two Men Burned by Flaming Floor Wax

A can of floor wax, ignited in some mysterious way, exploded and burned two men who were polishing the woodwork in an office in the sixth floor of the Chamber of Commerce building, Federal and Franklin sts., today.

The men, Daniel Connors, 62, of Mt. Auburn st., Watertown, and James Kelly, 67, of Grove st., Melrose, were treated at the Haymarket relief station for burns about the arms and face. Connors was held for observation, but Kelly was allowed to go home.

Officers Elected by Fleet Reserve

The annual meeting and election of officers of Branch 3, Fleet Reserve Association, was held in the headquarters at 66 Main st., Charlestown.

Officers named were W. R. Willis, president; F. C. Richardson, vice-president; E. P. Clancy, secretary, and R. McAlona, treasurer.

AGED CYCLISTS IN ANNUAL RIDE 'ROUND HUB

Veterans Will Spend Night in Mansfield; Four Are on Wheels

The 51st annual wheel about the Hub of the Boston Bicycle Club started today.

Meeting at Warren st. and Walnut ave., Roxbury, the four veteran cyclists pumped their way to the home of Quincy Kilby, president of the club, 101 Browne st., Brookline. From there by Jamaica pond to the Arnold Arboretum the club peddled for the annual call at the Fairbanks House.

The noon stop was made at Cobb's tavern, Canton. Before nightfall the wheelers expect to be at Mansfield tavern, where the night will be spent.

Tomorrow the wheel continues to Plymouth and Duxbury, Marshfield and Greenbush. The final stop on the way back will be at the captain's place in Atlantic.

The four club members who actually rode their bikes were: Walter G. "Doc" Kendall of Squantum, Theodore Rothe of Roxbury, Charles F. Travis of Brookline and Fred J. Perreault of Malden.

Others rode in a motor bus. They included Walter Swan, 85, and Henry Kelt, both of Brookline; Kenneth Woodward of New York, Elmer Whitney of Dover, N. H.; Albert Schaff of Cleveland and Edward and John B. Kelley of Roxbury.

WIFE CHARGES HOLSWORTH BEAT HER

Jamaica Plain Woman Is Witness for Mother in $50,000 Alienation Suit

Mrs. Doris E. Holsworth, formerly of Jamaica Plain, told a Suffolk Superior Court jury today of beatings which she said she received at the hands of her husband at home, on a railroad train at the South station, in the botanical gardens at Buffalo and on the stairs of their house.

At one time, when she protested against being slapped, said the witness, her husband told her, "Your mother had the nerve to put her initial, not mine, on all the wedding linen."

Mrs. Holsworth was testifying in defense of her mother, Mrs. Marion B. Campbell of Windsor, Ct., whom Mrs. Holsworth's husband, Wayne C. Holsworth, is suing for $50,000, claiming alienation of his wife's affections.

One of her many beatings was administered, said the witness, when she attempted to conceal in her bosom a letter which her mother had written to her.

Mrs. Holsworth testified that her husband resented not only her mother's visits to their home, but also the visits of her own young women's friends.

When one girl, who had been maid of honor at her wedding, came to stay over night, Holsworth took the guest's couch and threw it down cellar, bedclothes and all, the witness declared.

Mrs. Holsworth told the jury that, because she carried the couch up three flights of stairs and arranged it in their flat once more, her husband took her by the throat and struck her.

J. Edward Barry Is Cambridge Candidate

J. Edward Barry of Cambridge today filed nomination papers for the mayoralty of Cambridge. Richard M. Russell, son of the late Governor William E. Russell, and Mayor Quinn are the other candidates.

Mary Young, former leading lady of the old Castle Sq. Theater stock company, believes 10 years is too long to wait payment of a debt, according to dispatches from New York.

Miss Young has filed suit in city court in New York against Henry Wagstaff Gribble, playwright and director, claiming $802.98 is still due on an old debt.

The actress said she loaned a large sum to Gribble prior to 1920 and the amount sought is still due. The author denies existence of the indebtedness and said Miss Young promised to produce his play "The Outrageous Mrst. Palmer," in Boston nearly 10 years ago.

Paine Tapestry Is Hung in Art Museum

The late 15th century Gothic tapestry acquired from Knole House, England, by Robert Treat Paine, 2d, and by him to be given to the Museum of Fine Arts, was hung on the north wall of the Tapestry Gallery. It measures 30 feet by 12 feet and represents in six panels the Passion, from the time of Christ's being brought to the high priest, Caiphas, to the offer by Pilate to release Barabbas in his stead to the Jews.

WORN SICK BY MURDER CASE

Worn out by his efforts to solve the mystery of the slaying of Samuel Reinstein, New York racketeer in Hotel Huntington, Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle was today ordered to remain in bed by his physician.

Doyle, who has worked night and day on the case since Saturday, returned to his home at 4:30 this morning, and because of his condition a physician was called.

He warned the official that he must get some rest, and word to the effect was sent to Dist. Atty William J. Foley. However, the assistant district attorney later sent word he would communicate with his chief tonight if he did not see him.

In the meantime the investigation was going on along widely separated lines. Dist. Atty. Foley said he had received information from New York and from Bethlehem, Penn., bearing on the case, but would not divulge it until he has talked with Doyle.

Sister in Break Must Return Loot

Six months' suspended sentence, a year's probation and an order to make restitution for a watch and several dresses were imposed on Mrs. Sarah Sneider, 27, of Phillips st., Beverly, in the Lynn district court today on charges of breaking and entering the home of her sister, who lives in Chestnut st., Lynn.

I WANT MAYOR TO READ IT AS PLAYED

Feel Sure He Will Find Not of Objectionable Line Have Been Omitted

The Theater Guild and backers of the banned O'Neill play, "Strange Interlude," decided not to give Mayor Nichols one more chance before calling in the federal courts in efforts to proclaim a literary Thirteenth.

A special Theater Guild director got forth for the mayor's office, bearing a bulky, dog-eared manuscript, scarred with the pencils of the censors of the play which saw and heard Strange Interlude before Boston's officials labeled it menacing to morals.

The manuscript taken to City Hall was the "acting script" of "Strange Interlude" as the drama is played by the company which still hopes to appear here.

Theater Guild directors sent word to Mayor Nichols they had revised the stage version of O'Neill's masterpiece" and say it were not minus most of the words and phrases which struck him as improper when, in his duty, he perused the original book.

The Theater Guild folk informed the mayor Strange Interlude spoken isn't quite as outspoken as Strange Interlude written.

In the event of the mayor's repeated refusal to reconsider the original thumbs-down attitude on "Strange Interlude," its backers would still not be without resources, they declared.

They were still confident today that, if worst came to worst, by a old obtain a federal injunction forbidding interference with the play on the ground that banning it would be an infringement of the free speech.

There were, on the other hand, two minor reverses admitted today by Strange Interlude's defenders. Mayors Cassano and Quigley of Revere and Chelsea, went on record with a bang as declining, without thanks "he, to them, doubtful honor of playing host to the O'Neill drama in their respective cities.

Gov. Allen Invites American Legion to Boston in 1930

ASKS M'NUTT TO HELP GET CONVENTION

Veterans' Commander Guest of Honor at Luncheon; Wife Is With Him

A plea to bring the 1930 American Legion convention to Boston was made by Gov. Allen at the testimonial luncheon to National Commander Paul V. McNutt in the Hotel Kenmore today.

"We need the Legion con- tion," the Governor said, "to make the tercentennial celebration the great success it must be. It belongs to Massachusetts, because if it were not for the founding of the Massachusetts Bay colony perhaps the other sections of the nation would not exist. Here was the beginning of things."

Comdr. McNutt responded and told of the aims and hopes of the Legion. In his recent European visit, he said, he found the other allied nations ready and willing to form a lasting peace with the United States.

NOTABLES PRESENT

Among some of the Legion notables at the luncheon were State Comdr. John J. O'Connell of Amherst, Gen. Alfred P. Foote, Gen. Jesse F. Stevens, Gen. John H. Sherburne, National Vice Comdr. Edward L. White, National Legion Auxiliary Comdr. Anna Manion, former Atty.-Gen. Herbert A. Parker.

Richard R. Flynn of the state soldiers' relief department, President Timothy F. Donovan of the City Council, representing Mayor Nichols; former State Comdrs. Leo A. Harlow and Dr. William H. Griffin, State Adjt. Dennis M. Haverty and Judge Edward L. Logan.

Clement A. Norton, superintendent of Commonwealth Pier, was in charge of the luncheon arrangements.

McNutt was given a reception by Massachusetts Legionnaires, state and city officials.

WIFE ACCOMPANIES HIM

Accompanied by Mrs. MNutt and Col. and Mrs. H. Nelson Jackson of Burlington, Vt., Commander McNutt attended the Fidac convention, the international society of allied war veterans, in Belgrade, Jugoslavia.

While in Europe he also dedicated the new headquarters of the Paris Post No. 1, American Legion.

The America was met at Commonwealth Pier by State Commander John J. O'Connell, the executive committee of the Massachusetts department and past commanders of the State body.

Governor and Mrs. Allen and National Vice-Commander and Mrs. Edward L. White of New Haven were included among the reception guests at the State House.

The party proceeded by automobile from Commonwealth Pier, being serenaded by children at Filene's store on passing. A stop was made at City Hall, where Commander McNutt was greeted by the acting mayor.

The reception was preparatory to the departure of delegates from the local posts for the Legion National Convention at Louisville, Ky., where an attempt will be made to have Boston named as location for next years convention.

A personal invitation to bring the national convention of the legion to Boston next year was extended to the commander by former Mayor James M. Curley when the latter visited the Curley campaign headquarters in Province st.

BAUER MAY GET IN SENATE RACE

Mayor Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn, who had declared he would not run again, today indicated that if "urged" he might be a candidate for the United States Senate.

Incensed during Lynn's tercentenial celebration because no special postage stamps were issued commemorating the event, Mayor Bauer has hinted at various times that he might like to try for higher political honors.

He came out "flat-footed" today, however, and declared the Massachusetts congressional representatives were lobbying their "butt."

"It's about time," he said, "that somebody went down there with some new ideas. The California Senators had pull enough to get a special stamp, bearing a picture of their redwood trees, and we could not get stamps for Lynn's tercentennial.

"I don't promise that I will run for the Senate, but I might if I thought the people of Massachusetts showed they wanted me."

Governor Allen to Receive 33d Degree

Governor Frank G. Allen was among 81 Masons selected at the concluding session of the supreme council of Scottish rite in Dayton, Ohio, for the honor by 33d degree at the meeting next year in Boston.

James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor in the cabinet of Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, Governor John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania and W. G. Clyde president of the Carnegie Steel Co. of Pennsylvania, are also to be honored.

BIG CATCH CUTS FISH PRICES

Fish prices slumped today when vessels arriving at the Boston Fish Pier brought in good hauls.

None of the ships reported especially heavy catches individually, but the total poundage was better than average.

The Natalie Hammond brought in 13 swordfish and 13,000 pounds of mackerel. The Elizabeth and James carried 42,000 pounds, the Col. Lindbergh, 20,000 pounds, and the Little Joe, 50,000 pounds, all mackerel.

The steamer Saturn brought in 78,000 pounds of haddock and the steamer Crest was second with 70,000 pounds.

Large cod brought 7 to 7½ cents a pound; market cod, 4½ to 5 cents; haddock, 5½ to 6 cents; swordfish, 34 to 35 cents; pollock, hake and cusk, 4 to 4½ cents, mackerel blinks, 4½ to 5 cents; lemon sole, 8 to 9 cents; gray sole, 9 to 10 cents, white halibut, 28 to 29 cents; gray halibut, 25 to 26 cents, and flounders, 5 to 6 cents.

MOTHER JAILED FOR FORGERY

Mrs. Mary Dailey, 33, of Lynn, mother of three children, pleaded guilty to forging a check and was sentenced by Judge W. M. Keating of the superior criminal court at Lawrence to an indefinite term at the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn.

It was charged that she forged the name of the Rev. John A. Sheridan of Lynn to a $250 check and cashed it at the Essex Trust Co. at Lynn.

She said that the money was either lost or stolen from her during the recent tercentenary celebration at Lynn.

Police stated that she had been in the Lynn court twice on charges of larceny and had been placed on probation each time.

Four Held in $1000 for Alleged Thefts

Four East Boston men were held in $1000 each for hearing October 1 on a charge of larceny from an unidentified person, following their arraignment in East Boston District Court. One of them, John R. Franks, 21, of Chelsea st., is also charged with carrying a loaded revolver without a permit.

The other three are John Palladino, 22, of Chelsea st.; Samuel Sylvester, 19, of London st., and Joseph Tuberosa, 22, of Chelsea st.

2 Held in Kidnaping and Killing of Boy

Two suspects were arrested today by Sergt. Robert Mooney of the Hanover, N. H., police, who for more than two months has been investigating the kidnaping and murder of 10-year-old Salvatore Demore of the North End.

The slain boy was the son of Santo Demore, North End business man and admitted participant in underworld feuds of the district.

After $5000 ransom had been demanded of Demore and attempts to pay it had miscarried, the child's mutilated body was found on the Saugus marshes. The father was believed by authorities to know the identity of the kidnapers.

Both prisoners were booked merely as "suspicious persons."

HOLDS CHINESE IN SHOOTING

Brought here from Bellingham, Wash., where Boston detectives after a six months' search found him working as cook aboard an Alaskan salmon fishing boat, Frank Lee, Chinese, formerly of the South End, was held without bail today by Judge Dowd of municipal court.

He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill.

According to the police, Lee drew a gun on Michael Hayes, a former Boston police officer, in a dispute in the Red Lobster, a Hudson st. cafe, when Hayes was shot in the foot.

Lee was arrested at the time and held for the grand jury in $5000. He skipped bail and escaped to Alaska.

Pinkerton detectives, employed by the bondsman, trapped him in Bellingham and Washington authorities arrested him. Patrolmen Crowley and McDonough of Lagrance st. station escorted the continent and brought the prisoner here.

In court today defense counsel asked for a continuance, saying the hearing would require two or three hours.

"Not in this court," said Judge Dowd. "It won't take more than 10 minutes."

Former Hub Lawyer Held for Larceny

William D. Hopkins, a former Boston lawyer, was arrested today in New London, Ct., for the Boston police on a charge of larceny from Miss Rose B. Hicks of Claremont Park, South End. Hopkins is alleged to have taken a total of $2025 from Miss Hicks on two different dates in 1928 and 1927.

TO PLACE FLAG IN YO CHAPEL

A State flag was presented by Governor Allen to a group of members of the 26th Division to be placed in the 26th Division Memorial Chapel in Belleau, France. The flag will be taken by members of the division to Belleau next month. The pilgrimage will start October 10.

The staff of the flag, which was accepted by Gen. John H. Sherburne in behalf of the division, bears the following inscription: "To the World War Veterans. All Honor and Glory. Presented by His Excellency, Frank G. Allen, Governor, to the 26th Division Memorial Chapel, Belleau, France, Sept. 19, 1929."

Emerson Students Register Tomorrow

Emerson College will begin its 50th scholastic year next week, and advance registration indicates a full school.

Registration day for entering students will be on Saturday of this week, and returning students will register on Monday next. Classes will begin on Wednesday, the 25th. The evening school division will open on October 14.

19 PROSECUTED IN AUGUST IN FOOD FRAUDS

Director Lythgoe Reports 12 Convicted for Milk Law Violations

Nineteen persons, including two town slaughtering inspectors, were prosecuted for various infractions of the pure food laws during August, Hermann C. Lythgoe, director of the state food and drug division revealed today.

Of these cases, Lythgoe said, 12 were convicted for violation of the milk law. Another one was found not guilty.

One person was convicted under the false advertising law for utilizing oleomargarine on pop corn advertised as "buttered pop corn." Another was convicted for using adulterated maple syrup in a restaurant.

For violation of the slaughtering law, Lythgoe commented as follows.

"Two were inspectors who put the official stamp of their respective towns upon carcasses which they had not seen slaughtered and two others, butchers who did the slaughtering in the absence of the inspectors, were prosecuted."

Out of 999 samples of milk collected, Lythgoe reported 22 adulterated by the removal of cream and 14 by the addition of water. The skimmed samples, he said, came from restaurants and the watered ones from dealers and producers.

Out of 52 samples of food taken, 12 samples were discovered to be either adulterated, misbranded or did not conform to legal standards.

ISSUE WARRANT IN KIDNAPING

Judge John Duff in municipal court today granted a warrant charging John Brown, 45, no known address, with kidnaping Elizabeth Adams, five, or Briggs pl., South End, who was found yesterday.

Patrolman Joseph Boland of Division 5, who arrested Brown, told the court the man first admitted having purchased candy and ice cream for the child, but later denied it.

Patrolman Michael R. O'Leary of the same division described the finding of the little girl on the steps of the home of Mrs. Mary Moses of Oneida st., who told him that she had identified as Brown had left the child there.

18 German Leaders Greeted by Allen

A group of 18 German industrialists, guests of the Hamburg-American Line, were today received by Governor Allen. The introductions were made by D. L. Harkins.

In the group were Otto Grebenstein, Hanover; Dr. Erich Hamann, Elbing; Wilhelm Hoffman, Berlin; Martin Horvitz, Adalbert Jensen, Duesseldorf; Dr Hugo Jost, New York; Richard Kluge, Berlin; Wassil Luckhordt, Berlin; Robert May, Elbing; Friedrich Niederhoheim, Berlin; Hans Schetfer, Elbing; Dr. Ernst Stern, Berlin; Dr. R. SPEEDING FROM PARIS TO HELP ELECT CURLEY

Atty. Murray Goldman of Roxbury Sends Message; Many Clubs Back Ex-Mayor

All the way from Paris a young man is speeding to assist in the James M. Curley campaign for mayor. He is Murray Goldman, chairman of the Democratic club of Ward 14, Roxbury.

He sent the following cablegram to the former mayor:

"Leaving Paris today to assist in your successful campaign. Home 26th."

Mr. Goldman is an attorney.

Scores of indorsements were received from social, labor and fraternal organizations pledging their support to the former mayor at the Curley headquarters today.

Two hundred members of the Knights of St. Pinbar, Corkmen's Association, headed by John W. Flynn, president; Dennis Manning, secretary; Patrick J. Long, John F. Clancy and Michael J. Dunlea went on record as favoring the former mayor's candidacy.

The Polish-American Citizens' Club of South Boston, 650 members and associate clubs in Roxbury, Brighton and Hyde Park have written their endorsements as have 300 members of the Roxbury and Dorchester Italian-American Citizens' Club.

Radcliffe Student Conference Opens

The fourth annual student conference of Radcliffe College opened today at the Girl Scout headquarters, Cedar Hill, Waltham. The conference will end Sunday.

Thirty girls, representing heads of all student societies, are attending in order to discuss questions of interest to both students and the administration.

Among the questions to be discussed this year are those connected with college publications, student responsibility, and freshmen. The guests include President Ada L. Comstock and Dean Bernice V. Brown.

Second Big B. & M. Outing Next Sunday

The second of three outings for employees of the Boston & Maine railroad and their families will be given Sunday at Pine Island Park, Goff's Falls, N. H. Special trains will leave Boston, Berlin, N. H., Portland, Me., and Keene, N. H., making stops at intermediate points.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

Coal is really a great deal like men in some respects. With both, it is not a matter of what they look like—but a matter of what they do. "Metro" Coal, with maximum heating qualities and a minimum of ash needs no artifice to enhance its already great prestige, but rather, still presents you its own clean self—as nature made it—to heat your home economically and efficiently. Anthracite Coal is still the King of New England Fuels—and "Metro" is the King of Anthracite. There is no need to speculate, no need to gamble, about your fuel supply. To be sure of service and dependable Natural Anthracite Coal call HUBbard 8800 and ask for "Metro." That's easy, isn't it—and certain.

CHARGE MATTRESS SHIPMENTS ARE MENACE TO HEALTH

29 RAILROADS ACCUSED BY COTTON MEN

Complaint Alleges Cargoes Are Being Sold in Violation of the Law

Charges that enormous quantities of old mattresses, infected with disease, are being transported on railroads in violation of the United States public health laws, are made in a complaint filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the American Cotton Waste and Linter Exchange of Boston.

The complaint is against the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany, New Haven, and 26 other railroad and transit companies.

In a long bill of particulars the petitioners allege that the condemned mattresses are being used by the railroad by manufacturers of other commodities because of unreasonably low and illegal freight rates at which the railroads complained of carry the mattresses.

It is expected that the commission will hold a public hearing upon the complaint in Boston some time within the next two months. In reciting the alleged violation of the public health laws and the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission the bill of complaint says.

MENACE TO HEALTH.

"That the movement of said old cotton mattresses in consignment of defendants devoted to the carriage of foodstuffs and other commodities, without the cleaning and disinfecting of said equipment after its use for the transportation of the said old cotton mattresses is detrimental to the public interest.

"That said old cotton mattresses are taken from dump piles and are merely packed in bales prior to shipment to manufacturers of felts, batts and upholstery.

"That most states have enacted laws regulating or prohibiting, for the protection of the public health, the use of old and second-hand cotton materials in the manufacture of new mattresses, bedding, upholstery and other articles of common utility, and that several of the largest automobile manufacturers, consumers of a goodly portion of the felts and batts, would not use such undesirable materials if it were possible to prevent the movement of old cotton mattresses and the price of the materials reclaimed therefrom were not lower than that of said cotton wastes."

SHIPPED AT LOW RATE

The cotton waste exchange in its complaint further claims that the condemned mattresses, shipped out in millions of pounds to Detroit and other large manufacturing centers for upholstery, are given the same rate as rags by the railroads complained of, instead of the regular rate on mattresses.

"The result is, officials of the Exchange said today, that on a carload of old mattresses shipped from Chelsea, Mass., to Detroit, the legal rate called for by the classification established by the Interstate Commission is 88 cents per 100 pounds, but the railroads, through the action of a central committee, class the mattresses as rags and carry the stuff at a rate of 33⅓ cents per 100 pounds.

The freight rate on waste cotton, used in competition with old mattresses, is 44 cents per 100 pounds."

Asked about the state regulation of the shipment of old mattresses and their use in manufacture, Hermann C. Lythgoe, director of the division of food and drugs in the state department of public health, admitted today that the problem is a serious one.

Barber Shop Quiz to Reopen Thursday

In connection with its investigation of barber shops, the State Department of Public Health will resume public hearings in room 546 at the State House Thursday.

Dr. George H. Bigelow, State health commissioner, said:

"We are particularly anxious that at that time anyone who feels they have been infected in a barber shop should give us information on that matter. Our efforts brought out but a negligible number of such infections.

Here's How They Get Into Harvard

STUDENT ARMY FLOCKING BACK TO COLLEGES

294th Freshmen Class Reports at Harvard; Girl Schools Reopen

Harvard's 294th freshman class reported for registration today—and found itself, temporarily at least, in glorious masculine monopoly of the ancient Cambridge college and all its works.

The young women of Radcliffe, self-appointed sisters to the Crimson males, don't show up until April 23. For three whole days Harvard will be the Harvard of yore, with its yard gloriously free of uninvited feminine visitors.

Nor need the lonely first-year man, pining for a dinner or a dance or a movie with a lady friend, feel himself lost in a womanless world. Not a bit of it.

The Wellesley girls are back to school, too, whole special trainloads of them.

The Boston & Albany railroad ripped its regular schedules all to rags and tatters today, hailing expresses for unscheduled stops at the Wellesley station to let the fair students and their baggage—most especially their baggage—off.

The young women of Simmons also trooped once more to their studies today.

There was a reason, therefore, for the hauling out of phonebooks in Harvard dormitories and the dropping of nickels in paystation slots.

For those without a stepping-out urge, there were also activities available at Harvard. Buffet supper was on schedule at the Union and, for freshmen who hadn't more pressing dates elsewhere, there was offered opportunity to stay after eating and hear President Lowell and Dean Alfred Chester Hanford.

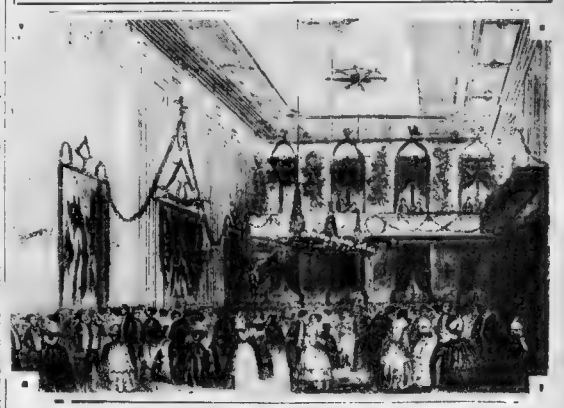
Late reports from the Harvard registration office showed almost 1000 of the incoming class signed on and ready for their studies.

Steals Silverware in Wollaston Home

A thief forced his way into the home of Robert B. Kessen, Kemper st., Wollaston, last night, while occupants were asleep on the second floor, and stole silverware valued at $50.

Lieuts. John J. Avery and Jeremiah Hinchon, Quincy inspectors, who investigated the break, reported that entrance was effected by forcing a rear window.

Old Boston in Pictures—No. 61



BOSTON'S society folk of another day were wont to stage their fetes and celebrations in Union Hall, considered one of the most elegant of its kind in the country, and situated at Washington and Essex sts. Nowadays it would be hard to find a hall such as this within many miles of that spot. This picture was made in 1852 and is published through the courtesy of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Tipsy Driver Sent Away for 2 Months

John F. Lane of Walker st., Charlestown, was sentenced by Judge Willis W. Stover in the Charlestown court to spend the next two months in the House of Correction at Deer Island, as a result of his being found guilty of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, and so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

Lane was also found guilty of refusing to stop on the signal of an officer.

Bill Demands Patient's Consent in Operations

The consent of the patient will be necessary before any physician can remove any organ of the human body if the bill filed by Senator James A. Torrey of Beverly passes at the next session of the Massachusetts Legislature. The bill was filed at the request of Mrs. Annie Dixon Brown of Lafayette st., Salem.

The bill provides the penalty of a fine of from $50 to 500, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

The bill, which is somewhat of a new departure for proposed legislation in Massachusetts, provides:

A physician shall not remove any organ of the body from a patient without first obtaining the consent of such patient, if an adult, or of the patient's parents or guardian, if a child.

After the removal of such organ, the physician shall show it to the patient's parents or relatives explaining the necessity for such removal.

Actions of contract or tort for malpractice, negligence, error or mistake, against physicians, may be taken at any time within 10 years next after the cause of action accrues.

A physician shall not handle or treat a patient in such a way as to cause pain to the patient without first explaining that pain will result from such handling or treatment and obtaining permission therefor from the patient, if an adult, or from the patient's parents or guardian, if a child.

Guild and Moors Confer With Allen

Courtenay Guild and John F. Moors of the Boston Finance Commission, the members of which are appointed by the governor, spent a half-hour with Governor Allen in his office at the State House.

Although nothing was given out to newspapermen it is understood that Guild and Moors urged the reappointment of Chairman John C. L. Dowling of the commission.

If You're 75 and Ma Says 'Yes'—Well O. K.

Today's bright and snappy weather did not hinder the hustling populace who approached the bookshop of Paul A. Jackson, 29 Pemberton sq., from pausing in the cold long enough to read the following typewritten notice:

"Any person or persons, under 75 years of age and living in Boston, who wishes to purchase any of these books, pamphlets, prints, brochures, leaflets, pages, or parts or portions of such which contain, include or mention such words as ankle, leg, arm, damn, Hades, whoopee, etc., etc., and so on, must first secure an affidavit from his, her or its mother and countersigned at City Hall not later than the year 1601, stating that he, she or it will not be corrupted, led astray, learn immorality, birth control, sex appeal, evolution, that the earth is flat, that angels do not have wings, that all other nations, creeds, born or unborn, have a right to differ in opinion or have opinions from Bostonians; that the Cabots and the Lowells did not descend from a cod or cods or other fish.

"Millions of books have been printed and about 10,000 others are issued each year, but we, the proprietors, hereby guarantee that we have read every book, page and word, and that we are in the position, situation and condition to find, point out, show, disclose and explain each and every word which is banned, prohibited and excluded from the vocabulary of all infants under 75 years young.

"The above is for our protection, prosecution or prohibition for selling such material and is written and signed in the book.

RADIO NOTES -:- PROGRAMS -:- PERSONALITIES ON THE AIR

LISTENING IN

By BERT BROCKBANK
Radio Editor

GLADYS SWARTHOUT, internationally famous mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be the guest artist tonight in the Armour program to be broadcast through WBZ and a coast-to-coast network of the NBC system. Miss Swarthout formerly starred with the Chicago Civic Opera Company and during the past season was one of the luminaries of the Ravinia summer opera.

She started her rise to fame with the Minneapolis Symphony as first soprano and since has been heard in the East as well as the Middle West and also on the Continent. An American by birth and training, she studied four years in Italy to complete her musical education, the possesses a voice that is thrilling to hear. Miss Swarthout will be supported by a 30-piece concert orchestra and a mixed chorus of 18 voices and trio, under the direction of Joseph Knecht. Her vocal selection in her group, "Answer Thou the Land" from "Mignon" and Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

MARY and Bob, traveling sweethearts of the True Story Hour, invade the Grand Canyon in Colorado tonight to witness the wild ceremonial dances of the Indians and hear their weird songs at the Hopi House. They invite the radio audience to enjoy with them the thrilling entertainment. The stirring revelations of a woman who lived only for the thrill of her power over men will be the piece de resistance of the dramatization. The flattery of a rogue meant more to this woman than a man's love, but—tune in station WNAC at 9 o'clock for the complete story.

Shradertown is agog with excitement. Gus and Louis, the garage artners, who have been quarreling over the sweepstakes ticket for the Schraderton Fair, will be given an opportunity tonight to present their claims before the committee. The judges have decided to divide the $1000 prize between the two and Mary Jones, the maiter over the bowling alley, mayor and sheriff of the town. This is where the fun begins, for the mayor plays a master stroke by placing the partners in a position where they must push the ball their personal differences before they can receive the prize money. As usual, from WBZ at 8:30.

THREE personalities of the sawdust ring, Lottie Aymar, celebrated equestrienne; Josephine de Mott, daring aerialist, and Mlle. Dolly Castle, famous lion and leopard tamer, will be broadcast by the radio audience by Bob Sherwood during the broadcast of the Dixieland Circus through WEZ and the NBC System this evening. Before he became a radio announcer Sherwood spent nearly half a century with the leading circus organizations. The performers he will introduce are personal friends and they will take part in Bob's radio circus show. The program will have the following musical background:

Schneiders' Band ..... Laurendeau
Hi-Henry's Triumphal ..... Farrar
Clown Band
The Billboards ..... Chenette
Circus Band
In the Cradle of the Deep
Clarinet
Buffalo Bill's Reverend ..... Chambers
Circus Band
Pottawatomie ..... Weldon
Clown Band
Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight
Callione
Lion Tamer ..... Sousa
Circus Band

THE Cafe d'Harcourt, dear to every student of Anatole France, and known to thousands of American artists and writers who have resided in the Latin quarter of Paris, will be the locale for tonight's "Evening in Paris" program from Station WEEI. Gone, however, are the long-haired artists with their long clay pipes, for the cafe has become a society rendezvous. Entertainers sing Parisian and American songs and a jazz band plays from time to time for dancing.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE, soprano, Colin O'More, tenor, and a supporting cast will present the third act of "Maytime," a musical play in four acts by Sigmund Romberg, when Philco's Theater Memories are heard through WBZ. This musical romance of old and new New York traces the affair of Ottilie Van Zandt and Richard Wayne through three generations. In the first act, Richard, after having reprimanded by the girl's father, Colonel Van Zandt, leaves for South America to seek his fortune. When he returns, as told in the second act, he finds Ottilie has married an old rival, Claude Van Zandt. To prevent an unhappy quarrel between Ottilie and her husband, Richard declares that he is going to marry a girl named Alice Tremayne.

New York Show Opens Monday

The 6th annual radio World's Fair will open at Madison Square Garden on Monday afternoon to admit more than 300,000 visitors during the course of the six-day period ending Saturday night.

HUB RESPONDS TO MAJESTIC CONTEST

Repeating the success which has marked "Miss Majestic Popularity Contests" wherever held, Boston has responded with enthusiasm to the announcement of the makers of Majestic Radio that such a contest is to be held in this city.

Sponsored by Grigsby-Grunow Company, manufacturers of Majestic Radio, and by their representatives and dealers in Greater Boston, the contest is notable for many unusual features. Votes are based not only on sales and demonstrations of Majestic Radios, but are also credited for coupons distributed to present Majestic set owners; for coupons given away at the Contest Headquarters; for coupons printed in the daily papers and for coupons distributed to purchasers of admissions to leading theaters.

Beginning today, each purchaser of an admission ticket to the new B F. Keith Theater or the Keith-Albee Boston Theater will be given a voting coupon good for 300 votes. Ballot boxes have been placed in the lobbies of these playhouses.

Nominating coupons, each good for 1000 votes, have been printed in the leading Boston papers and are already coming into the contest headquarters in large numbers. A photograph is being filed with each coupon.

The contest is open to any girl or woman in Greater Boston between the ages of 16 and 40, except employes of interested organizations.

A further unusual aspect of the contest is that all ballots are to be collected, counted and checked by certified public accountants.

First prize is to be a model 181 Majestic Radio, a complete sports ensemble from a leading specialty shop and a round trip to Bermuda with all expenses paid for winner and a companion.

Second prize is a model 92 Majestic Radio and a complete sports ensemble. Third prize is a model 91 Majestic Radio and an Elgin studded white gold wrist watch. Seven other valuable prizes have also been announced, and others will be added from time to time by the various participating dealers.

Nominating ballots are now being received and information concerning the contest is being given by the Majestic Radio dealers of Greater Boston and at the "Miss Majestic Popularity Contest Headquarters," 224 Tremont St., Boston.

BIG ACTS FOR PUBLIX DEBUT TOMORROW

Stars of Stage and Screen in Gala Program Over Columbia Network

An array of talent eclipsing anything that has ever been put on the air will be heard tomorrow night during the Paramount-Publix hour over the Columbia Broadcasting System, through WNAC, from 10 to 11 o'clock. Seventeen artists and two orchestras, under the direction of nationally known leaders, will give a gala program for this premier of the series of nation-wide broadcasts sponsored by the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation.

The artists who will be heard include stars of both the stage and screen. They are: Jeanne Eagels, Clive Brook, Victor Schertzinger, Charles Ruggles, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Nancy Carroll, Jack Oakie, Helen Kane, Frederic March, Paul Ash, Joe Penner and the Four Merrymakers.

The program will offer a variety of entertainment, running the gamut from acts of music, drama and comedy. It will take radio listeners from New York to Hollywood and back again, giving an intimate picture of happenings in the motion picture studios, and of acts in Publix theater stage units playing in Indianapolis and Omaha.

Following the opening, which will be picked up from the marquee of the Paramount Theater located at 43rd st. and Broadway, the radio audience will hear an overture by the combined Paramount symphony and jazz orchestra.

Miss Eagels and Mr. Brook will enact the opening dramatic scene from Alfred Sutro's play, "The Laughing Lady," under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. Charles Ruggles, comedian of the musical comedy stage who recently has been featured successfully in "The Lady Lies," will be heard in a characteristic song and patter.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, who will play selections on the twin consoles. Following their numbers, the radio audience will be transported to Indianapolis, where they will hear Joe Penner, featured in "Sidewalks of London," and then back to New York studios of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Radio Queen

OLIVE SHEA
Pretty 18-year-old New York miss has been chosen Queen of Radio for 1929. She will hold court next week at the Radio World's Fair in Madison Square Garden.

"GRID" NAMED BY DE FOREST

Many of our present day radio terms, such as "radio," "radio telephone," "audion" and "grid" were coined by Dr. Lee DeForest, inventor of the three-element or present-day vacuum tube

The name "grid" was selected because this particular part of the tube closely resembles a roaster grid. In order to avoid mistakes by workers when assembling the component parts and to distinguish the grid from the plate connections, Dr. DeForest had a plainly stencilled card posted above each workbench, bearing the caution, "Remember, boys, green to grid, always."

Broadcasts for Football Fans

Football followers will be kept closely informed of gridiron contests through the season. They will be referred in a novel way over WNAC each Saturday evening from 6.30 to 7 o'clock.

Special Pierpath facilities have been provided to make these broadcasts up to the minute, the returns being received at the studio of WNAC and put on the air as soon as possible Of unusual interest will be the musical background. The title chosen for the broadcasts is "Collegiana," musical selections interspersing the announcing of football scores.

9TH RADIO SHOW TO SURPASS ALL OTHERS

Annual Exposition at Boston Garden Next Month to be Colorful and Entertaining

Work starts tomorrow in charging over Exposition Hall at the Boston Garden for the ninth annual Radio Exposition, which opens there Oct. 7. Hundreds of workmen will be ready Monday morning to move in the necessary equipment for booths, decorations and other essentials for the largest radio show ever held in Boston.

The task of decorating the Garden and Exposition Hall has been placed in the hands of a firm of decorators who will be busy up to the day the show opens.

The Garden will be transformed from an amphitheater seating thousand of persons to a hall suitable for the presentation of more than $3,000,000 worth of radio equipment and products of the radio manufacturers of the country.

In the Garden, where thousands have viewed hockey games and boxing bouts, a new scene will greet those who attend the exposition this year. The high vaulted ceiling will be entirely covered with drapes of varying shades, hanging down over and closing off the upper balcony. More than 200 booths will house the exhibits of the various manufacturers, which is more than in any previous year. These booths will be installed and set up within the next week, so that the various exhibitors may start their own decorating before the exposition opens.

Director Sheldon H. Fairbanks is sparing no expense in an attempt to make the show the finest in every way. Incidentally the radio exposition here is the oldest in the country.

The mammoth R. C. A. historical exhibit will be shipped from the research and experimental laboratories in a spur track just outside the Garden. The setting up and installation of this exhibit alone is estimated to take nearly a week. The exhibit, the first of its kind in the country, depicts in moving figures the growth and use of the new science from Marconi's first triumph to the present day use of radio in the various arts and other modes of travel as well as in the home.

The Boston & Maine railroad, cooperating with the management, has announced that during exposition week tickets will be sold to Boston will be made at reduced fare. This includes the greater part of New England served by the railroad

All space in the Garden has been contracted for by the various manufacturers and wholesale distributors. There is a long list of areas available in the Exposition Hall and, according to the management, before the show opens every square foot will have been filled. While only meager information is at hand at present in regard to the exhibits which will be exhibited, several manufacturers have signified their intention of displaying new models here for the first time.

Popular broadcasting stars will appear on the stage in the Garden where they will present their regular program for both a visible and invisible audience. Stars of the stage and screen will also appear during the week in the Garden and Exposition Hall. In all respects the annual radio exposition is expected to surpass anything of its kind ever presented in the city.

Sharkey Back in Training

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Sept. 20—"I look for a great fight when Armand Emanuel, coast heavyweight, and Jim Maloney clash in the 10-round semifinal to the Sharkey-Loughran bout at the Yankee Stadium on next Thursday night," said Mr. Boston today.

"I have had an opportunity to get a line on Emanuel as he has breezed through fast workouts here with Arthur Flynn and Joe Vincha. On one occasion, he also traded socks with Jack Sharkey and showed he has plenty of ability.

JACK CONWAY

"Emanuel is a barrister fighter. He received a degree at law and started practicing on the coast. He then discovered that a young man in his twenties can earn much more money if he is a good boxer than he could as a struggling lawyer.

"Armand is managed by his father whom everybody in camp calls Pop. The latter told me that his fighting son has earned $100,000 during his ring career. He will add $5500 to this amount when he collides with Shamus next Thursday night.

"Emanuel's stand out fights were with Tommy Loughran. They battled twice, once in New York and the other time on the coast. Loughran got the duke on each occasion, but each verdict was booed. In the coast bout, Emanuel scored with a knockdown.

EMANUEL IS FAST AND CLEVER

"Emanuel is a fast, clever boxer with a world of speed. He isn't as rugged as Maloney. While he won't be able to punch it out with the South Boston warrior, he will rely on his speed and skill to win.

"Pop Emanuel looks upon Maloney as one of the best heavyweights in the country and realizes his son has quite a scrap on his hands.

"I bumped into Eddie Harvey on the sidewalk in front of the Garden. He told me that Brother Charley is recovering from the effects of his latest auto accident. Charley gets into almost as many auto accidents as Tom Heeney stops right-hand punches nowadays. Eddie figures that Heeney will blast out a win over George Hoffman, former amateur champion, in their 10-round set-to on the Sharkey-Loughran card. The bettors along Broadway like Hoffman's chances.

"Frank Bruen, vice-president of the Garden, tells me that he will match the winner of either the Hoffman-Heeney or Maloney-Emanuel bouts against Tuffy Griffith on October 18. Tuffy is a wow along Broadway since he flattened Dr. Ludwig Haymann, which wasn't any feat at all. I know bouncers in some of Boston's speakeasies who could have duplicated Tuffy's feat. But that doesn't mean Griffith isn't the goods. He looks like a great heavyweight, being aggressive and a darling of a puncher.

TICKET PRICES ANNOUNCED

"The Garden announces that the scale of prices for the Sharkey-Loughran mill will be $26, $13, $5.74, $3.15 and $1.05. There's a mere matter of 90,000 seats for a fight at the Yankee Stadium.

"There's a new lightweight sensation in Jersey by the name of L. Zazzarino. He will sell out the Garden against Al Singer next month. 'All tickets will be sold 10 minutes after they are placed on sale,' Francis Albertanti told me. And Francis knows his public.

"I met Joe Massaguer, sports editor of 'El Mundo' of Havana, searching for a Spanish cafe in the Roaring Forties. He wanted to know if Paul Shannon is packing up for the World's Series. Joe hasn't missed a big series in years. During the past few months he says he has been sentenced to writing boxing on account of the success of Kid Chocolate. He will cover the Sharkey-Loughran bout and doesn't care who wins. Joe is a baseball fan and thinks boxing is a good thing to keep away from. Perhaps he's right.

BRADDOCK PICKS SHARKEY

"Jimmy Braddock has picked Sharkey to lick Loughran, but has topped the Boston contender that he will be opposed by a marvelous ring general. Braddock should know, as Loughran toyed with him in their title skirmish.

"Oh, yes, I played some golf with Sharkey on his day off. I guess he thought I was one of his sparring partners judging by the way he teed off. Jack was to get back to the boxing end of his program today and from now on will leave golf to Bill Raftery, Jack Leary, Alex Bird, Yank McNamara and Francis Ouimet."

ALTHOUGH he never has sustained a knockout defeat in his long career in the ring, Andy Martin, New England featherweight champion, faces that danger tonight at the Boston Garden, where he clashes with Bushy Graham of Utica, N. Y., world's bantamweight champion.

Graham is eager to leave an indelible impression in his first important featherweight bout. Tonight's contest marks his first step in a campaign which he hopes will land him the world's crown, now worn by Andre Routis.

The little Utica buzz-saw, a natural bantamweight, will weigh 123 pounds tonight, the heaviest of his career.

Graham's punch has left its impression on most of the topnotchers in the game today. Even the hard hitting Bud Taylor was on the mat four times in three bouts with Graham, while Kid Chocolate went to the mat twice. Both Taylor and Chocolate have shown themselves to be almost invincible in bouts in this city and for this reason Graham looms up as the most dangerous opponent Martin ever met.

SOX HEAD IS SURE OF A. L. VICTORY

By JOE CASHMAN

THE Athletics will win the world series in five or six games.

That's Bob Quinn's version of it.

All magnates must pick their respective league representative to win the fall classic to be ethical, but the Red Sox proxy is picking the Mackmen because he is firmly convinced that they will beat the Cubs, after watching both clubs in action.

If he thought otherwise, he might not say so, but he would refuse to comment rather than pick the As. That's the kind of a fellow he is. His interests lie [illegible] connected with the game for [illegible] he is a classy, sportsmanlike magnate and knows it from [illegible] to serve [illegible] his opinion a sour something.

"BOTH the Cubs and the Athletics are good ball clubs," he said. "The Mackmen appear the better to me, and if they play the brand of ball they have to grab the pennant, they ought to win in five or six games.

"I have seen both clubs play several times, and it is my opinion that the Athletics are stronger in every department with the possible exception of pitching. Connie Mack has some fine hurlers, but so has Joe McCarthy.

"The superiority of the American Leaguers in the other positions will enable them to win, even if the Cubs get better twirling. The A's are strong everywhere and rate with the Yanks of 1927 and 1928.

"They haven't the great confid-

64 REPORT FOR EXETER TEAM

Exeter, N. H., Sept. 20—The first football practice of the season brought 64 candidates to Clinton Field.

Veteran players were Capt. Arthur Lane, tackle; Robert Maffert, guard; "Clare" Curting, guard; Wilson Tuttle, guard; Forrest Waite, guard; and Layton Schoch, end; John Knibbs, quarterback; Dean, halfback; David Cheek, halfback; Deeb Peter, halfback, and Walter Marting, halfback.

Of the last year's squad, Robert Lowe, Henry "Bus" Weston, "Tommy" Evans, George Parker and Robert Etherington, all backs, were among the number, and among the new candidates were Patten of Milwaukee, Blake of Huntington, Clark of Amesbury and Mueller of Newton, all likely looking players.

NOTABLES SEE LOUGHRAN BOX

Harvey's Lake, Pa., Sept. 20 (INS)—Tommy Loughran faced a workout this afternoon before one of the largest delegations of notables that ever gathered around a training camp ringside.

Leading sports writers from New York, Philadelphia and Boston invaded the camp last night and Lieut.-Gov. Arthur James of Pennsylvania, Mayor Dan Hart of Wilkes Barre and other notables are expected to arrive before Tommy Loughran climbs into the ring.

Loughran went on the road for six miles this morning and despite the long jaunt weighed 190 pounds when he stepped on the scales. He plans to enter the ring against Sharkey at about 188 pounds, which is four pounds heavier than Jack Dempsey weighed when at his peak.

Chelsea and Newton Police Nines Play

The strong Chelsea police baseball team will clash with Newton police nine today in the first of a series of games for the Massachusetts police championship title. The Chelsea team has not lost a game this season.

The Newton outfit, which has lost only two games and the Chelsea bluecoats are confident of winning the series.

Tufts Freshman Squad Reports

Jimmy LeCain's Tufts freshman football squad reported for the first time and by all indications the yearlings should have a banner year. A large squad of 40 men was out for the first day's practice with several more expected today and tomorrow.

CAMBRIDGE LATIN and Boston College high will oppose each other in the first regular football game of the scholastic grid season at Russell Field, North Cambridge, this afternoon.

The Maroon and Gold squad has more seasoned players than the Cantab rival and for this reason is being favored to win.

Leander MacDonald admits his team is pretty green, but those who have watched the popular Cambridge coach turn out fine elevens year after year are of the opinion that B. C. high will find the scoring very difficult. The James st. boys may collect two touchdowns but that is about all. Cambridge Latin teams have that fighting spirit which remains till the last whistle has been blown.

Ott and Cronin are the veteran B. C. high backs whom the untried Latin linemen must stop, and with a rugged line of their own to open up holes the visitors will be formidable.

Dugan will bark signals in the Cantab backfield, while Muello and La Ronde will be on the halves. Lakakos will play fullback.

La Ronde may do the booting for Cambridge Latin, although Coach MacDonald is still undecided as to who will take over the punting task.

Morris, Ott and Cronin have been punting for B. C. high in practice and Coach McManus is uncertain as to which of the trio will be given the assignment this afternoon.

Some of the more important games on tomorrow's list are: Nashua at Everett; Pinkerton Academy at Medford; Lowell at Melrose; Whitman at Brockton; Lynn General Electric Apprentices at Malden; Methuen at Wakefield, and Providence Commerce at Salem.

Everett high athletic authorities accomplished a master stroke in securing Al Weston, ex-Boston College grid star, as assistant to Coach Dennis Gildea. With a backfield expert like Weston coaching the ball-carriers, Gildea can devote all his attention on the linemen.

In the workout at Everett high field, Weston had the ends running down under punts, while Gildea sent the forwards through a conditioning drill.

Over 120 youths are out for positions on the Everett high team, which seems in for a successful season, despite the lack of veteran material.

Jackie McLean backed against the first team in its signal drill. McLean gives signs of developing into a capable quarter back. His handling of the Everett first string revealed precision and snappiness, which characterize all stellar grid pilot's work.

The new field house at Everett is being rushed to completion and is expected to be ready within a very short time. It will be of great benefit both to the Everett and visiting teams which in the past had to jostle their way through the crowds at the main gate in order to reach the old locker building.

Gerald Smith, guard on the Arlington high team last fall, is attending St. Anselm's where he seems certain of cinching the guard berth on the Saints' eleven.

Over 75 candidates reported to Coach O'Brien at East Boston high for the opening practice session. There are 28 aspirants for end berths, 21 out for tackle and guard positions, eight pivot candidates, and 18 seeking jobs in the backfield.

Callahan and Cahill, ends; Curry, guard; Carr and Corbett, tackles; Chiarini, Grazziano, Capt. Carroll and Larkin, backs; are the nine veterans around which Coach O'Brien must build his eleven.

SCRIMMAGE FOR TUFTS TODAY

THE Tufts football squad will start serious work today in the shape of real scrimmage.

The past week has been taken up with a series of drills on fundamentals for both linemen and backfield men.

Coach Sampson would like to spend more time on this work in view of the comparatively inexperienced squad he has this year, but with the late start of this year's practice and the problem of building up a team for the opening game October 5, feels that he cannot delay in starting the heavy workouts.

Two tentative teams have been picked out and are composed almost entirely of veterans and the more promising men to come up from the junior varsity and freshman teams of last year.

The freshman team of last year should be well represented in the lineup when the opening date rolls around in view of the fine work which they have shown to date.

The next few days' scrimmage should help Sampson to pick his most promising men from among the leading candidates, and, although the team will be light, there is no doubt but that it will be as fast a team as the "Hill" has seen for years.

Toughens Stomach for Title Battle

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 20 (AP)—Bat Battalino, in training here for his bout Monday night with Andree Routis, featherweight champion of the world, probably will begin today to toughen his mid-section. That is, if he heeds the reports that runs down out of the Frenchman's training quarters.

The reports say that the champion, who is conditioning himself in a Holyoke (Mass.) gymnasium to give Bat's mid-section a good drumming for at least a few of the scheduled 15 rounds of the bout, which is to take place in the East Hartford Velodrome.

B. C. Students Still Try to Put Skates on Eagle

Although officials at Boston College have announced that there will be no hockey team at that school this winter, there is still a possibility of a change. The student body and prominent alumni have not abandoned hope.

Hockey was dropped from the list of sports at the Heights because it was a financial failure, the B. C. A. A. having lost between $12,000 and $15,000 last season.

A petition of the student body will be tendered to the president of the college within the next two weeks asking skates for the Eagle.

Harvard Eleven Impresses Scribes in Workout

CANDIDATES APPEAR IN FINE SHAPE

COACH ARNOLD HORWEEN allowed the scribes to watch his Harvard grid hopefuls in action at Soldiers Field today. Quite a gathering of the experts took advantage of the opportunity and were impressed by both the work and condition of the squad.

The Crimson warriors stepped around as though they had been in training for weeks instead of days, and it was the consensus that Coach Horween and his assistants had brought the gridders along faster this year than ever before.

he session opened with a signal drill which was run off with snap, speed and precision. This was followed by kicking practice.

Art Hugsley, Joe Potter, Barry Wood and Sumner Putnam got off some long boots and the ends showed ability to cover these high spirals with ease.

Sumner Putnam did some dropkicking and did it very well.

A blackboard talk and "skull" practice by Horween and Casey followed. The entire squad, including Tom Gilligan, Barry Wood and Art Devens, the cripples, attended.

Three elevens under quarterbacks Putnam, Gleason and Bill Wetmore went through a long signal drill. The original lineups picked several days ago were retained at first. Later Putnam was turned over to what had formerly been Gleason's eleven, and the Brookline boy was given the all-varsity to direct.

The rookies, Bernie White and Ed Mayo, showed great speed as they ran through plays. Both boys are making a strong bid for a first team berth. The fact that the axe is due to fall after Saturday's scrimmage acts as another inspiration.

Linesmen and backs were interchanged during the remainder of the practice and everyone had a chance to play on the first eleven.

Mitchell Wins British Pro Title

Wentworth, Eng., Sept. 20 (AP)—Abe Mitchell, noted British golfer, won the 1000 guineas professional championship today from G. H. Rodgers of St. Annes Old Club by 5 and 7 in the 36-hole final.

The victory carries with it the professional match play championship.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

You golfers should, by now, if you have raised practice generously with your rounds of play, be fairly well acquainted with the back swing. So far I have instructed you in the straight mechanics of the action. There is one thing which you must watch out for. In the backswing you swing the club back more than you take it back. I know that in your swings you exert a tendency to take the club up and back, and too much of this will restrict the back swing action so that, as you take the club up and around, your action will be too close to you. The right action is to swing it out and away from you. With a close-in swing you can stroke the ball seemingly with a nice action, and yet it doesn't go far. That's because your swing leverage is decreased. The wider the back swing, short of drawing your body into a weaving action, the more leverage you get against the ball, since the clubhead travels a greater distance in a wider back swing.

today. The Hub Italian has never received the full credit to which he is entitled.

He has met them all with few setbacks and his recent victories in this city over Eddie Shea of Chicago and Pud Taylor stamped him as one of the most dangerous contenders in the ranks of the featherweights.

Then, too, Martin always has been able to hoodwink the hard hitters. Others have tried to knock out Martin, only to drop the decision at the finish. Benny Bass made a futile attempt to stop the Hub boy while others have met similar fates.

While Graham on account of his knockout record, will enter the ring a favorite tonight in the betting, nevertheless, Martin will be supported strongly by his friends who expect him to register another ring upset.

The most colorful preliminary card of the year will support the appearance of the bantamweight champion here. Eddie "Newsboy" Curley of the West End clashes with Steve Smith of Bridgeport in the 10-round semifinal. This bout is expected to provide plenty of thrills and it will give Curley his first shot against a recognized topnotcher.

In an eight-round bout there is title to choose between Larry Rikkon of Cambridge and Victor Libon, middleweight champion of Italy.

These hard hitters are expected to provide one of the best bouts of the night. In a six-round event Johnny Gonzales of Los Angeles meets Jimmy Briggs of Revere. In addition, three four-round events also are on the card.

Bob Quinn Picks A's to Win World Series

ence the Hugmen possessed, however, and they haven't a threat like Ruth. So I don't expect them to make any clean sweep, but I don't look for them to drop more than two games.

"I also expect the mound aces of the two teams, Grove and Bush to be overshadowed by Quinn and Earnshaw and Carlson and Ruel.

"Old Jack Quinn is the type of pitcher that figures to give a gang of sluggers like the Cubs all sorts of bother, while Carlson is one of the best pitchers in the game.

"Stars have a habit of falling down in the series but Simmons and Hornsby, the outstanding players of the two clubs during the race, are both great performers when the firing is the heaviest and should be among the individual stars.

"And now that you have my story," said Bob in conclusion, "get me a couple of tickets, will you? The demand is the greatest ever. Not even the club owners can get an extra one and all have hundreds of requests. The result in each league was a most popular one, and if the parks permitted, the attendance would be the greatest ever."

WHAT interests Boston fans far more than what Quinn and Carrigan think about the series is what are their plans for next year.

And neither of them has anything to say about that.

It is generally understood in baseball circles now, however, that Carrigan will remain on the job for another season, at least.

He was keenly disappointed over the showing of the team early in the campaign and while he never said anything definite about it, his friends looked to him to quit this fall. He dislikes leaving his family to travel all over the circuit and, with the future appearing decidedly dark, it was felt that he was spending his last season on the job.

Then the club started to click. For the past six weeks it has been playing great ball. This has so encouraged Carrigan, it is reported, that he has decided to come back.

There is nothing official about this. Maybe he doesn't know yet himself. Still, it is logical to assume he will return.

He took over a hopeless aggregation and has spent three years trying to get it somewhere. His efforts are just starting to bear fruit. It doesn't seem likely that he would quit just when the success he has been striving for appears right around the corner. It's a good bet that he stays.

Danvers Wins

Portland, Me., Sept. 20—Danvers won its second straight over the Cape Elizabeth polo team today before a large crowd, 8 to 4.

MARSTERS IN AERIAL DRILL

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 19—The Dartmouth football coaches called a halt on the string of scrimmages which have featured practice the first half of the week and held a long session of dummy scrimmage which again saw forward passing coming in for a great deal of attention.

Aerial drill found Al Marsters again heaving nine out of 10 passes for the first team with the halfbacks, Shep Wolff and Len Clark and Enos on the receiving end of a variety of plays.

Ray in Marathon Race With Horses

Philadelphia, Sept. 20 (AP)—Joe Ray of Chicago and Hans Kolehmainen of Finland, two of the greatest long-distance runners in the world, will appear in the six day Marathon race in which men will compete against horses, starting at the Arena next Monday night.

STAR CARD FOR ST. JOE'S SHOW

The indoor amateur boxing season will start tomorrow night in Mechanics Building, when St. Joseph's T. A. S. will start its 15th season as sponsor for amateur boxing shows.

The show will be the largest opening tourney in the history of amateur boxing in this State. Entries have been flocking in from all parts of New England.

Taunton will send a team under the direction of Fred Yelle, well-known lightweight of some years ago, and in addition teams have been entered from Brockton, Quincy, Worcester, Dover, N. H., and many other cities throughout New England.

Every class has attracted a record turnout of young boxers.

In addition to the 160-pounds class, bouts will be held in the 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight divisions. Every class is open to all comers, and has already attracted entry after entry.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

B. C. Eleven Plays First Game of Season Tomorrow

FRESHMEN TO OPPOSE VARSITY

THE first college football game of the 1929 season will be played at University Heights tomorrow morning when Joe McKenney's Boston College varsity tackles Bill Kelliher's freshmen over the four-period route.

The coaches will officials and the two teams will go at it hammer and tongs from start to finish. Coach McKenney will start his best eleven and instruct them to play just as hard as though they were battling Holy Cross for the championship of America.

Charles Murphy and John Dizon will be at the ends, Henry Plausse and Jack Young at the tackles, Al Morelli and Jack Maloney, guards; Andy Anderson, center; Capt. Paddy Creedon, Joe Mirley, Joe Shea and John Marr in the backfield. Creedon will call the plays.

The freshman lineup is still unsettled. But Coach Bill Kelliher has plenty of rough and ready youngsters who are big enough to give the varsity team a fight all the way through.

B. U. Varsity Backs Show New Strength

BOSTON UNIVERSITY'S backfield quartet has developed a scoring punch and if the Terrier backs carry on against opposing elevens this fall as they did against the second team in yesterday's scrimmage, B. U. may enjoy a better season than the initial drills indicated.

In the second scrimmage of the week yesterday afternoon the first team ran roughshod over the seconds and rolled up three touchdowns while holding the scrubs scoreless. The Terrier first team backfield was composed of Marino, quarterback; Hally and Thurman, halfbacks; and Waike, fullback.

With the exception of Marino each member of this quartet scored a touchdown apiece, but the selecting of plays by the B. U. pilot was flawless and, barring injury, it is practically certain that he will win the starting post in the West Point game next week.

Useful Hints on These Pages

NO woman can afford to miss these magazine pages. Here you will find household information of great value, a wonderful article by an eminent physician, important advice on matters of etiquette by a woman who knows, and fashion hints fresh from Paris, showing handsome gowns.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

IN carbolic or other acid poisoning the acid should be neutralized in the stomach if it is strong. To neutralize acid one may use lime water, chalk and water, soap and water or ordinary baking soda. The sooner one of these is taken the better. Then by all means a physician should be called.

A KISS FOR CORINNA -:- By May Christie

Story of a Rich Girl and Poor Girl After the Same Man

CHAPTER 22.

THERE was something quite attractive in the clear pallor of Corinna's skin—reminded him of the gardenia he was wearing.

Jove! Something rather apt in that simile! As he glanced at the flower in the lapel of his coat he saw that its petals were already curling. Shrank from even the lightest touch—she was like that. Had the same delicate translucency of fiber. Was aloof—offish.

He had heard Denise's tactless exclamation. He recollected now having seen this girl in Julian's box. She wasn't the type one could hardly flirt with. Proud little thing. You could tell it by the look in her eyes they were lovely eyes—with that hurt expression in them they were hauntingly beautiful.

He liked the proud little turn of her head, too, set on the long throat. Graceful as a flower, wasn't she?

Among the painted beauties in this place, that clear pallor was most attractive.

Darned if he wouldn't like to make a date with her himself! Denise had snubbed him badly the night they'd had that scrimmage at the roadhouse. She had snubbed this poor child, too. Were he to single HER out for his attentions, THAT would strike home—would entertain himself, and at the same time would be a good way of getting even with Denise.

So he came over to Corinna now and made himself extremely charming. Before she could stop him, from a nearby booth he had bought her an expensive doll.

The doll was French and clad in strange cloth pajamas. It had a wig of flaming orange hair. The tiny face below was pallid, like a dope fiend. And a fake stump of cigarette—the end realistically glowing—protruded from the bloodred lips.

Van Tuyl presented the doll to Corinna with a laughing comment. "Perverted little creature! She looks a bit like her!"—and he nodded towards Denise over his shoulder.

There WAS a likeness. A caricature, of course.

Denise swung around at his remark. They were all looking at Corinna.

Said Van Tuyl, laughing: "I've just bought a replica of what you're going to look like—soon—if you don't chuck smoking and drinking and flirting and generally raising the devil!"

Denise was furious. But she hid her annoyance under a smiling, queenly exterior. She said—Corinna saw the scornful dilation of her nostrils: "Miss Corinna doesn't have to be reminded of this customer. I give her quite enough trouble. Where she wishes to brush my hair and manicures my fingers!"

With that, she stretched out her hand to take the doll, and indeed those nails of hers looked clawlike. She handed the doll to Malvey, murmuring: "You may have it! Men are much kinder to women than other women!"

There was an awkward pause. At that moment Mavis and Peter Pattison returned from the tent of the fortune-teller. Marie at once bounced on the fantastic doll. She held it aloft, making it fall into funny little writhings and twistings and postures that created much merriment.

Only Corinna was silent. With Miss Van Wyck and the side of Malvey, she felt painfully out of things, even though Van Tuyl was being attentive to her.

"Let's walk around the zoo and give the freaks and the dowagers the once-over!" chirruped Marie.

Marie looked radiant, with a sort of elfin beauty. It was playing fire, she knew, to go on caring for Peter.

But for tonight—tonight only . . . she had capitulated.

The bright lights and the music and a cocktail she had consumed after the show had gone to her head just a little. Why not take what the gods offered, and be happy—even though only for an evening?

In a queenly manner Miss Van Wyck in the robes of Cleopatra swathed around her—was leading Malvey ahead of the party. She had boasted about him to Jack Van Tuyl and Mortimer, and she was saucy that he should have come here, in view of all of them, with a girl who waited on her in a hairdressing parlor!

She constituted herself now as a social guide to Malvey.

Corinna was a pleasant enough person in her own place—but she'd certainly keep her in that place, Denise determined.

And indeed, strolling around the arena with the beautiful, young Cleopatra—there were many glances leveled on them from boxes and loges, and some turning of heads and quizzing of glasses.

Denise was a well-known young person. Tonight—and for a double reason—she was proud of the sensation she was creating.

She was glad that this diffident young man was now seeing her in her own proper setting. The very breath of life to her was admiration.

Her wit flashed out. Behind the scenes, she had already had some glasses of champagne, and that—combined with the sensation she was causing—made her quite brilliant.

Malvey was infected with her charm—her reckless gaiety. As they walked along at the head of their party, he laughed merrily at her sallies.

He had been nettled because Van Tuyl had given that doll to Corinna. She was still with the fellow. She wasn't alone or neglected. And after all, since Miss Van Wyck had singled him out for this attention, it behooved him to act graciously by her friends—especially when she practically his boss' adopted daughter!

Love's a Thief -:- -:-

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

LOVE'S a thief. He has been called blind. He has been said to love luxury the best, deep carpets, rich food, "his wing a lady's fan," himself running away when the going got to be the least bit rough. He has been said to be at his very best in a cottage, at plain food, happiest when poorest. It has been said of him that he is fickle, or faithful, made of wax or of gold. He has been called mighty—and kittenish. Everybody who can say a word or two about what they think has taken a shot at "LOVE." And everything has been said over and over again. Food he is to some hungry ones. And the most delicate nectar to the sensitive, who like a very minute morsel upon their plates instead of the deep-dish pasty that Friar Tuck ate with his fingers. Men in love have been called "madmen" by one testy poet; and "the only sane ones" by a jollier crowd.

The righteest of all are perhaps the lines that label Love a thief. For once having met up with that highwayman, you never have quite the same things in the world, even though he may have given you more than you lost in exchange. Nothing is ever the same once he has burgled your heart. Some lose a very precious faith in the beauty and truth of life, according to what mask he wears. Some lose selfishness and find themselves in a world like that at the end of the rainbow, dyed with color, rich with new lights and fairy aspects. Some lose their belief in Love himself, once he has shown himself. The hard and cold hands around for his hardness and coldness when the thief has fled with a laugh, and can't find it anywhere! The gentle and the good searches for those two possessions in panic, heart nocking as if in a falling elevator, and finds them gone, and a lump of sarcasm in their place like a cold stone out of the sea.

Love is an odd thief. He takes—and he leaves. The lucky ones are those who lose their tin and find gold in its place. The sad ones who find themselves after his visit with a colorless thing of lead to buy happiness with instead of the gold they had.

WEDDING FOR CASH

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES once remarked jokingly that while he would not advise any man to marry for money, there could be no objection to his going where rich young ladies were to be found. It is equally true that one who would make good friends must go where good, dependable friends are to be found.

Dear Miss Fairfax," writes Yvette on this subject. "Will you please help me with my problem? "I am twenty years of age, good-looking, a good dresser and not a bit gull. I am from out of town and have been living in the city for only a year. I have no friends here and have to depend on getting my boy friends at dance halls. My problem is this: "When I am at a dance I will meet a nice fellow, one that will not try to get fresh or personal with me. We will dance together several times and find that we have many things in common. He will then ask me for my phone number, sometimes I give it to them and sometimes I don't. Either way makes no difference, they are certain of not calling me.

"Can you tell me what they have in mind when they take a girl's phone number with no intention of calling her up? This has not happened once or twice, but many times. I have spoken to several girls like myself and they all tell me the same story. "YVETTE."

IF is, of course, true, Yvette, that some lonely girls and young men go to public dance halls for the reason that you do—because they are strangers or lonely. But that is not as it should be. Nice girls do not go and you are likely to meet there only those who frequent the halls, men who are not only ill-bred, but unprincipled and possibly dangerous. Many men of this type feel that a girl who frequents the dance halls is their prey—that she is not particular or she would not be there. You are more than foolish to give strange men your telephone number and address.

Be patient! In time you will make with while friends through your church and neighborhood associations.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you please tell me at what age girls and boys can get married without their parents' consent? I thank you very much.

BROWN EYES

The answer to your question, Brown Eyes, varies in the different states of the union and is likely to change from time to time due to new legislation in each state, so I suggest that you consult a lawyer in the state in which your marriage in question is to take place, to get the information you wish.

COLORFUL SEASON

Actor the bright coats of a sultan summer, one is not entirely willing to settle down to sombre Fall. Thus the mood for color has inspired the French couturiers.

In the model I'm illustrating today, the medium weight is printed transparent velvet in rich burgundy tones made even more luxurious by deep shawl collar of ecru lace.

The skirt shows the smart wrapped treatment, and falls in soft drape at side. It is attached to hip yoke that is shirred at self size to create swelling impression.

Style No. 8174 is in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. In the medium size, 3 yards of 39-inch material with ½ yard of 39-inch contrasting and 2 yards of 4½ inch lace, makes this charming dress.

Canton crepe in partridge brown, Independence blue silk crepe, and purple crepe Elizabeth are most attractive suggestions.

Pattern price 15c, stamps or coin (wrapped carefully). Enclose 15c additional if you wish a copy of our latest book of Fifth Avenue Fashions. All our styles are created in Paris or New York. Every pattern contains full directions. Very easy to use and guaranteed to fit perfectly.

Address all orders to Boston American Fashion Dept., 551 Fifth Ave., New York City.

Fashion's Fads

Soft and more enticing than ever are the antelope purses which are leading the parade in handbag fashions. Vagabond handbags with unusual trimmings of marcasite, and coming in neutral shades are seen frequently.

Tea for two becomes an occasion when the tea is served in a very unusual untarnishable tea set. The teapot, milk jug, sugar bowl and basin resemble fat silver books. The handles are but a ripple in the corner, and the tea or milk is poured through a small opening in the opposite corner from the handle.

Cap all your climaxes this year with a winsome cap of silk and chenille tricot. They are becoming to most people, and undeniably smart. Little veils can also be worn with them.

As a duck takes to water so do pockets take to a bathing suit. One of the latest of the bathing suits features this novel addition right in front. The suit is of beige and black wool.

SUNDAY SUGGESTION

AS the opening number of a Sunday dinner or a Sunday supper, or week-day company luncheon for that matter, I don't know of anything more attractive and refreshing than a melon ball cocktail.

This can be made from cassaba or honeydew melons or a combination of both, or a combination of cassaba, honeydew and watermelon. The balls are cut with a French potato ball cutter, or you can scoop them out with a spoon, and don't worry if they are not all perfect. Pile them in mounds in plain crystal cocktail glasses and pour over them a genuine syrup which you can get at almost any large grocer's. This is a gorgeous crimson syrup of delightful flavor and can be served ice cold this cocktail is hard to improve on either appearance or flavor. (Diced melon will taste just as good if the balls seem too fussy).

Creamed ham in a noodle ring, served with a crisp salad, makes a well balanced main dish. Here's the how of that, and also of the nut and potato croquettes that make an especially delicious accompaniment.

Martha Lee

CREAMED HAM

1½ cups milk
½ tablespoon onion
1 stalk celery
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
½ lb. cooked ham
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika

Scald milk with onion and celery cut in small pieces. Melt butter, add flour, when smooth add milk and stir until sauce boils. Add ham cut in uniform pieces, and seasonings. Keep hot until ready to serve. Hard-cooked eggs sliced, or cooked chicken may be used instead of ham.

NUT AND POTATO CROQUETTES

2 cups hot riced potatoes
1 cup cream or milk
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
Few grains cayenne
Yolk of 1 egg
1-3 cup chopped pecan nut meats
½ tsp. baking powder

Mix all ingredients with fork until light. Shape as for croquettes. Roll in bread crumbs. Dip in egg which has been mixed with a little cold water. Roll in bread crumbs again and fry in deep hot fat until brown. Drain on unglazed paper and serve.

CREAMED HAM IN NOODLE RING

Noodle Ring

2 tbsps. butter
1 cup milk
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
Few grains cayenne
½ tsp Worcestershire or other table sauce
½ tsp. paprika
2-3 cup noodles
2 eggs
Creamed ham.
1 can asparagus tips
1 can small peas
2 tbsps. flour
1 cup cheese

Melt butter, add flour and when smooth add milk and stir until sauce boils. Add cheese put through food chopper, and the seasonings. Stir until cheese melts, add noodles, cooked and cut in squares, egg yolks beaten until light, and fold in whites beaten until stiff. Pour into a ring mold which has been well greased, and bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven or at 325 degrees F. until firm. Turn out on chop plate, fill center with creamed ham and surround with asparagus tips, drained, cut in small pieces and heated with peas. Garnish with dashes of paprika on the noodle ring and a sprig of parsley in center of the ham.

For dessert, I'd suggest ice cream from the corner store and nut cookies

NUT COOKIES

½ cup shortening
1 cup white sugar
1½ cups pastry flour
1 tsp. baking powder
2 eggs beaten
½ tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. salt
1 cup chopped walnuts

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs, vanilla and flour sifted with salt and baking powder.

Second Part

1 egg white
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup light brown sugar

Beat egg, fold in sugar. Add vanilla. Spread first mixture on shallow pan sprinkle with walnuts. Spread second mixture over nuts. Bake 30 minutes in slow oven 325 degrees F. Cut in squares and cool.

Faithfully yours

Martha Lee

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A young man took my girl friend and me to a restaurant after the theater. We both ordered fruit salad. She ate her salad directly from the bowl in which it was served. I served myself several small portions from the bowl onto my plate, which was placed under the bowl. Please tell me which of us did the correct thing.

MRS. H. A.

IF the couple really are engaged, and the young man tells his parents the news, it is their social duty to go at once to call on the fiancee of their son and to welcome her into their family. After this important visit either parents may invite the others to dine.

WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE Marrying Age, for woman, is anywhere between 16 and 60, according to whether the bait is beauty, brains or money. Every man in the Dangerous Age, for a woman with a weakness for collecting wedding rings.

But, for a man, the darkest hour, the weakest moment, the most perilous age is between 20 and 25.

Up to 30, the average bachelor spends all his spare evenings and holidays in trying to prove that variety is the spice of love, and to dodging matrimony. After 35, if by luck or accident, he is still a free man, he is practically immune.

But, in between, he is a leaf in the wind! A helpless, little toy of Fate! Poor butterfly! That is the Susceptible Age, at which he stands poised on the brink of self-destruction, with one foot hanging over a pit of oblivion—and the other on a banana-peel.

It is the age at which he is most attractive, and most eligible. When he has "arrived" he can step in the midst of the struggle, for the first time, to draw a long breath and THINK about himself.

It is the restive hour, in which he begins to feel weary of club life and hotel cooking, and the sketchy housekeeping of a bachelor flat; to long for regular meals and well-ordered "place," where he can set up his household goods with a feeling of permanency.

It is the tempting moment, when he begins to sigh for quiet evenings, soft-shaded reading lamps, hot waffles for breakfast—and somebody to count his laundry, clean his safety-razor, and listen while he tells his troubles.

It is the fatal moment, when he begins to feel bored to death with the monotony of variety, and to feel "lonely" in a crowd, and sorry for himself. And disgusted with himself, and worried about himself!

And just at THIS, his weakest hour, he meets a new girl! A widow or a chorus girl, or a flapper, or a divorcee, or a vamp or a gold-digger. It doesn't matter ANY girl will do! There is always "a new girl"!

She may not be anything that he wants or admires, or needs or has dreamed of or longed for or imagined he'd marry. She may be everything and all that he should NOT marry. But he looks at her through rose colored spectacles, drapes her with all his illusions—and thinks of quiet evenings by the fireside, hot waffles for breakfast, home-cooked dinners, perfectly appointed clothes-closets. REST and peace and quiet companionship!

And, High Girl or Wrong Girl, if she wants him, he's HERS for the taking. Because he's in the MARRYING MOOD!

Joe Pointed Out as the Killer

CHAPTER 11

FOR as late as it was there was a good deal of activity at the station. A dozen plain-clothes men were waiting in the big room, when they brought Joe in, and the assistant county prosecutor was standing at the desk talking to the sergeant.

"Looks like big doings," said Joe.

"Shut up," said Flaherty; "recess is over. You open your mouth again and I'll close it for you."

They took Joe up to the desk to book him.

"Well, you got him," said the prosecutor, looking Joe over.

"Yeah, we got him," said Flaherty. "Did you chase the newspaper guys?"

"Yeah," said the prosecutor, "there won't be any leaks to this."

"O. K.," said Flaherty.

The sergeant nodded to him.

"All right, chief."

Flaherty took Joe by the arm.

"All right, Joe," he said, "we're gonna give you a nice little room."

"With bath?" asked Joe.

"Listen, boy," said Flaherty "we're gonna take all that smartness out of you."

Joe didn't say anything. He was trying to keep up his front until they locked him in his cell, but he was ready to drop. They had him; they sure to God had him.

The turnkey swung the big barred door wide. Flaherty took Joe to the door of his cell, unlocked the handcuffs, and gave him a push.

"All right, boy," he said, "I'll be back later."

"Listen, Flaherty," said Joe, "can't I even have a smoke?"

Flaherty laughed, motioned for the turnkey to lock the cell door, and disappeared down the corridor.

"Say, buddy," said Joe to the turnkey, "can't you get me a pack of cigarettes?"

"Nothing doing," said the turnkey, "not for fifty bucks. I got strict orders on you, boy."

The turnkey went away. Joe stood in the middle of his cell for a moment, then he climbed up on his bunk and looked out the window. Far away down a side street he saw a big electric sign: DANCING.

Joe flung himself down on his bunk. They had him; they sure to God had.

"If I can only stick it out!" he said.

Joe awoke from a doze and turned to look out the window. Still dark. He couldn't have been asleep long. Wasn't it never going to get light? He got up and walked to the front of his cell. It wouldn't be so bad if there were some other guys to talk to; but the cells on either side of him were vacant; also the ones across the corridor.

They sure ain't taking no chances with me," said Joe.

He began to feel very uneasy. Something seemed to be dragging at his stomach and he had a rotten taste in his mouth.

"Some of that highhat grub I et," said Joe.

The turnkey came down the corridor and stopped in front of Joe's cell.

"Say, buddy," he said, "they'll be wanting you up front pretty soon"

"Yeah?" said Joe. "Listen, can't you go to a cigar store and get me a pack of cigs. I got plenty of money, Ask the sergeant."

"Can't cut it," said the turnkey "What's doing up front?" asked Joe.

"A show-up."

"Yeah?" said Joe; then, "listen, I'll give you a couple of bucks for some cigs."

The turnkey laughed.

"Say, there's a guy in 18 that'd give me a hundred bucks for some dope. Not a chance. They sure are putting the clamps on us now. It's that damn Crime Commission business. Tough on you birds."

"Ain't it!" said Joe.

The turnkey went away. Joe threw himself down on his bunk. Yeah, now it was coming. That damn peroxide dame had sure put the kibs under him. Well, there you was! Can't tell how things are going to break. If he'd've been wise he'd've sent Joe to see the Big Boy or Rico. But then there's no use letting a dame get too familiar with everything.

Anyway, he had an alibi. But Flaherty was a rough agent and you could never tell what he would pull. Joe felt mechanically for his absent cigarette case.

"Hell," he said, "I lost my head! I lost my head! Rico ought to put a hunk of lead in me. As long as I been in the game and then don't know better. God, but I was dumb."

He turned over irritably and sat up. He heard the keys clanking down the corridor. A policeman stopped in front of his door and called:

"All right."

Joe got up. The turnkey unlocked the door. There were two policemen and a plain-clothes man standing a little way down the corridor. When Joe came out one of the policemen said:

"There's the guy that plugged Courtney."

They stared at him. Joe felt sick at his stomach.

"Yeah," said the plain-clothes man, "hey won't do much to that bird."

The turnkey took Joe by the arm.

"All right, kid," he said.

Joe walked between the turnkey and the policeman who had called him. They took him into a big room, where there were three policemen and about a dozen prisoners. Joe saw Buzz Liska, Steve Gollanez's lieutenant. They exchanged a glance.

A police sergeant got to his feet and shouted:

"All right, you birds, let's go."

The turnkey pushed Joe into line. A big door was swung open and he saw a small, brilliantly lighted room with a crowd of people lining the walls. Joe looked for the pervert's blonde. There she was, pale and hardboiled, between two bulls. Joe started. God, he had her now! She was standing side of Courtney when he dropped. Joe began to sweat.

The line in single file was herded in. Buzz Liska, who was in front of Joe, whispered.

"Say, what's this all about?"

The sergeant heard him and leaping across the room grabbed him by the shoulder.

"Any more of that," said the sergeant, "and some of you bad eggs is gonna get cracked."

"Drop dead," said Liska.

Joe found himself face to face with the blonde. She stared at him. Flaherty walked along the line and examined the prisoners. When he got to Joe, Joe looked away.

"How's that bath?" asked Flaherty.

"O. K." said Joe.

Liska said.

"What's the matter with you? Are you nuts?"

"Shut up," said Flaherty. "Keep your dirty mouth," said Flaherty.

A man Joe had never seen before, a big husky man with curly gray hair, went over to the blonde and said:

"Is he in that bunch, Mrs. Weil?"

The blonde nodded.

"Well, Mrs. Weil, this is a very serious matter, so don't make any mistakes. Now, if you're sure he's in that bunch, point him out."

The blonde compressed her lips and walked over to Joe.

"This is he is. There's the dirty skunk."

"Hell," said Liska, glancing at Joe, "it's your funeral, huh?"

The blonde stood glaring at Joe. "I hope they hang you," she cried, "shooting a guy like Jim Courtney."

"I never shot him," said Joe.

"Shut up," said Flaherty. "All right, sergeant, march 'em out.

"Say, it sure looks tough for you," "They can't prove nothing." said Joe.

The sergeant rushed at them.

"Where do you birds think you're at!" he cried.

Stepping back, he struck Joe a hard blow with his fist. Mechanically Joe set himself and raised his hands and stood looking at the floor. Liska said:

"Say, sergeant, I guess I can go home, can't I? My old mother'll be worried to death."

The sergeant stared at Liska then he laughed.

"I'm gonna hang on to you just for fun," he said

"Yeah?" said Liska. "Well not long, cause Steve's gonna spring me."

The sergeant motioned for the turnkey.

"Take the bad one up," he said, "you plant yourself over there on a chair, Buzz."

Easy

by BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL"

CHAPTER 29.

THE upshot of the argument was that Neal finally went across the street to the drug store and telephoned to Jim Goodwin.

"He's coming. I knew he would," he told Ann Marie when he got back to the flat. "He'll be here at seven."

Early in the afternoon Ann Marie began to get ready for him.

While Neal took a Sunday afternoon nap on the narrow bed in his living closet she dusted the big room and set the small table before the fireplace for three.

Then she went out to shop for things for a cold supper. Rye bread and thin slices of boiled ham. Roquefort cheese and olive oil and a big head of lettuce for salad, big rolls and a half-pint of cream for coffee.

Ann Marie had to break another $5 bill to pay for the things. She stood beside the counter in the little delicatessen, counting the money that was left in her handbag. . . . She had spent almost $20 of food in three days!

She had known that Neal was "broke," and so she had said nothing about splitting the expenses fifty-fifty, but had bought all the food they had eaten and paid for it herself.

"But I won't be able to do it much longer," she thought dismally, "unless Jim Goodwin does find some work for me to do."

Back in her own little apartment she opened her trunk and took all of her drawings from the bottom of it. She frowned as she looked them over. Once she had thought they were very good, but now they struck her as being ordinary and flat-looking.

But she took them with her when she went into Neal's flat at six o'clock and began to get the supper.

He had gone out and had bought the Sunday papers in her absence. They were strewn all about him on the floor now, and he was smoking a cigarette, dropping the ashes on the rug

"Neal, you ought to get dressed. It's almost time for Jim to get here," Ann Marie said to him at ten minutes to seven. "And I must pick up those papers, too, if you don't mind."

He raised his eyes and smiled at her.

"Gosh, you look pretty in that little apron," he said. "You look like somebody's cute little wife."

But he didn't get out of his chair to dress.

At five minutes to seven Ann Marie spoke to him again.

"Neal, I hate to have Jim Goodwin see this place looking so untidy," she said, pleadingly. "Please do go and put on your coat and a clean collar, and let me clean things up."

A blank expression came into his face.

"Gosh," I don't own a clean collar," he said. "I forgot to go to the Chinaman's for my laundry yesterday. His shop's over on Charles st. I suppose, if you went to the back door, he'd give you my clean collars, wouldn't he?"

Three minutes later Ann Marie was out in the wind-washed street, racing along to parade the China shop. She found it, went down a narrow little alley and knocked on the back door.

After a minute or two a fat, sleepy-looking Chinaman opened the door, and Ann Marie lod him what she wanted.

She waited in the darkness while he hunted through dozens and dozens of marked bundles of laundry. At last he found Neal's and brought it to her.

It was a big one with shirts and undersuits and handkerchiefs in it, and with the collars. Ann Marie gave the Chinaman a $2 bill and started back to Susquehanna Hall.

As she passed the door of the dimly-lighted vestibule a big shining car was swinging into the street—Jim Goodwin's car.

Ann Marie saw it, and flew up the stairs as fast as she could fly. She didn't want Jim to see her, carrying this big bundle of washing into the building.

"Hurry up and dress! Jim's here!" she said breathlessly to Neal when she reached the flat on the top floor, and thrust the bundle into his arms.

She had her coat and hat off, and her apron on, by the time Jim's knock came on the door. Her run in the cold wind had whipped bright color into her cheeks and there were stars in the depths of her eyes.

She didn't know what a picture she made as she opened the door and stood there against the candle-light of the room behind her

And a smile was in Jim Goodwin's steady brown eyes as he took the hands she held out to him.

"It's fine to see you again," he said.

It was fine to see him again, Ann Marie told herself. She had forgotten how nice his voice was and how easy it was to talk to him. He struck her now as being a very desirable sort of person to be with.

She had been half afraid to see him again, and Neal had said he was in love with her—"hay-wire over her," he had put it.

But now that she was with him she wasn't the least bit afraid of him. She simply felt friendly and happy and contented, somehow

"I'm getting supper," she said to Neal, vanishing for a moment behind the screen. "That is, I'm making coffee. I bought everything else at a store down the street."

As soon as she had said that she was sorry . . . She had not meant to tell Jim or anybody else that she was paying for the food that was set out on Neal's table these days.

But Jim didn't seem to notice it.

"I'm sure it will be very good coffee." he answered cheerfully "Do you mind if I smoke my pipe?"

Ann Marie came out from behind the screen.

"No. I love to see a man smoke a pipe," she said, filling the water goblets on the table. "It looks so—Oh, I don't know—Anyway, I like to see a man smoking one."

She watched him light his and settle down in a big chair near the fireplace.

"Neal will be here in a second," she said. "He's putting on his coat."

She could feel his eyes on her as she turned away from the table and began to stack the folded Sunday papers at one end of the long table in the middle of the room

"Where do you live?" in this building?" he asked, after a long silence and she nodded.

"Next door."

Another silence.

"Neal says you want to get some work," he said next. "He thought you might be able to do some pictures for a child's book, or something like that."

"Oh, I couldn't! I'm not good enough—not yet." And Ann Marie's face flamed. "You see, I thought if I could go to a school where they taught drawing and painting for a while—"

She broke off in the middle of a sentence. Then, after a moment, she went on

"I know I can paint pretty well—but not well enough. So I thought, if I could get some work and pay my way through a good art school of some kind, perhaps I would be able to make money painting later on."

Jim nodded. But before he had time to answer her the door of the dressing room had opened and Neal came out into the room. He had on a clean collar and shirt.

Ann Marie watched the two men shake hands

"Sit right down at the table," she said to them. "Everything is ready but the coffee."

She turned to get it. But Jim was too quick for her.

"Here, I'm the butler in this outfit," he said and brought the pot to the table

He held her chair while she sat down.

Neal never had done that for her, she couldn't help thinking as she began to pour the coffee.

Neal never did anything for her, as a matter of fact. He was one of those careless men who never opens a door for a woman or helps her into an automobile, or holds a chair for her at the table. . . . But then most men were like that, thought Ann Marie, who really knew very little of men. . . . Most men were thoughtless and careless creatures. Just big, grown-up boys, that's what they were.

She smiled into Neal's face as she handed him his cup, and all her love for him was in her smile.

"I think Ann Marie would like to read a book for my uncle," Jim said when the little meal was over and she started to clear away.

"Read a book?" asked Ann Marie, puzzled

Neal laughed. "She doesn't know what you mean, Jim," he said. "You're a girl whose father owns a book store she knows less about books than anybody I ever knew before."

And then he explained what "reading a book" meant

Jim's uncle owns a big publishing house, as I told you" he said, while Ann Marie listened intently. And they have a lot of people to read books to see if they are the kind of books they want to publish. . . . And Jim thinks perhaps you'd like to read one for his uncle's company."

Ann Marie shot a quick glance at Jim from her corner of the sofa. He was smiling at her in his friendly, kind way

"You say, yourself, that you aren't ready to try your hand at real pictures yet," he said to her, "and you do want to make some money. So if you want to read and shorten up a book for us, I'll be glad to fix it up for you. It would be a nice book in art probability."

Ann Marie sighed thankfully. She wasn't sure that she could do that sort of work. And yet she needed money.

"Then there's another thing You could do drawings or drawings for a company I happen to know about," Jim added. "Black-and-white sketches of girls in fashionable dresses—"

"Oh, yes, I could do that! I know I could!" sang out Ann Marie, all self-confidence suddenly "That's the sort of thing I really can do!—Well I'll show you my drawings —"

As she started across the big shadowy studio there came a loud pounding on the door that led into the hall. There was a sound of voices out on the landing. High shrill voices and a sudden shriek of laughter.

"Visitors," said Ann Marie, stopping in her tracks. "Oh, isn't that too bad! We were having such a nice time, weren't we?"

Neal stood up and walked to the door.

"It's a lot of people who live in this neck of the woods," he said "They're not bad."

He opened the door

Claire Calls -:- Interesting Story by N. Florence Leech

TED VANCE stood glowering at the prettiest girl on the dancing floor of the Country Club. While she was out of sight, hidden behind the broad, bulky shoulders of her partner, he glowered even more fiercely. But Claire Lynn was laughing at big Bill Sidney, with unmistakable pleasure.

"He's a weakling, in spite of his size," Ted thought bitterly. "But I make my girls see it, if you can!"

Round and round danced the lovely eager-eyed girl in the pompadour and frock, her partner's blond head bent close to her gleaming black hair, his lips murmuring in her ear while Ted stood and glowered. Other men cut in, but not Ted

"I wouldn't dance with her if she smiled and beckoned," he muttered, but wistfully. "If told her I'd count it she called me, and not unless she did, and I mean it!"

His hand rested involuntarily for an instant over his head, where in his watch pocket burned a huge solitaire in a platinum circlet. "No, sir! I wouldn't go," he repeated doggedly.

It was after midnight when Ted saw Sidney help Claire into the latter's Napoleon blue racer. The car disappeared down the snowy roadway in the direction of Claire's home, 14 miles distant.

Ted followed at a discreet distance, muttering imprecations at Sidney for driving so recklessly with his precious passenger. But Claire probably enjoyed the thrill. She mistook recklessness for courage, and had accused Ted of being "timid." Cold wind slapped his face, howled gleefully in his ears, and the protesting car skidded crazily on the slick, snowy road. Ted set his teeth and kept on.

Presently the road forked, and the blue car turned north. Either Sidney didn't know the road, or this was a joy ride! Ted fancied he heard a laugh. Suppose Claire knew he was following, and did this deliberately! Suddenly, in memory, Ted was back in the library of her home. She stood before him, cool and beautiful.

"I do not love you," she was saying.

"You do love me," he heard himself protesting, "and you need me—"

"You have always taken too much for granted." She snatched off his ring, almost flung it at him. "If ever I need you, I shall let you know."

Ted's bewildered hurt gave way to anger. "Until you call me, then, good by!"

And here he was, following her like a whipped puppy. Ted slowed the car and turned back.

Claire missed the reflection of Ted's lights in the windshield, and realized that he had taken the other fork. She was glad, she told herself. But suddenly she realized that she was cold, and that the road ahead was long and dark.

"Some night for a lark!" Sidney said, in her ear.

A lark—did he consider eloping with her a lark?

"Sidney," she asked suddenly, "how many girls have you been engaged to?"

He laughed, and the arm about her tightened. "Jealous?" he cried. "Oh, they all are!"

"I am not," she retorted. Sid took his hand off the wheel, his eyes off the road, and turning kissed her. The speeding car skidded for the ditch. It was Claire's hands which twisted the wheel barely in time, and the car stopped quivering

But in that instant Claire, like the proverbial drowning man, saw many things. "I think," she spoke huskily, "you might better take me home!"

"Like heck I will," answered Sidney, starting to back the car.

As the car lurched, Claire, who had said savagely, and Claire laughed

But at his request she crawled shivering out of the fracas and held the flashlight while Sidney tinkered with the engine. His language was not pleasant to hear, and Claire had to remind herself that she had accepted Sidney because he was so virile.

A feeble splutter, then a reassuring chug. "She's all right now," exulted Sidney. "Climb aboard."

"Turn around first," ordered Claire.

"Get in. We're going to carry out this elopement."

"Never!" She stamped her foot Then she gasped as Sidney lifted her bodily into the tonneau. He climbed in beside her, and his strong hands clasped the wheel.

At that instant a light flashed in their faces, a voice growled. "Out you come, mister, and make it snappy!"

Claire shrank back in alarm. This must be the escaped bank robber that the authorities were searching for. But Sidney would knock the assailant unconscious with one blow of his big fists!

"Git out!" Sidney slowly obeyed, his hands above his head, and obediently followed the dark shadow to the side of the road. Claire was suddenly terrified.

"Y-you stay put," he snarled at her as she moved. It would have been easy enough to start the car and escape, but that thought did not even occur to Claire Lynn. The man was tying Sidney's arms behind him. As he knelt to bind Sidney's ankles, Claire slipped out of her coat, leaped from the car, and with the heavy flashlight struck him on the head He dodged, and the blow was a glancing one. Now he seized her, and attempted to gag and bind her. As easily bind the wind that howled and shrieked about them!

Back of forth they struggled Neither heard an approaching car, nor saw a figure running toward them. Ted! Ted had come! With the arms and knees and feet. Ted fought. He knew nothing of the science of boxing. He only knew he was fighting for Claire, and put every ounce of strength into his blows. The man slipped, sprawled in the slush. Ted fell on top of him. He was choking Ted—Ted's hold was loosening—Claire struck again with the heavy flashlight and the man lay still.

"Ted, darling," whispered Claire as he brushed snow from her dress and slipped her fur cut around her

"M—y—s" Forgotten, Sidney rolled toward them. Ted smiled his rival, and with the same cords bound the robber fast.

"We're a thousand times obliged," muttered Sidney, thickly. "I'll take this fellow and leave him in the lockup."

He lifted the unconscious man awkwardly into the back seat, then reached to help Claire into the car She held back

"Won't you take me with you, Ted?" she asked dumbly.

He straightened, and his blue eyes snapped. "Did you call me, Claire?" he asked, tensely.

Her arms went around his neck her lips sought his. "Ted, I've been calling you all the evening," she whispered.

"Then," said he, "let's go."

Valerie Roemer of "Whoopee," is wearing the BEAUTY BOB. Proper care keeps her hair its such wonderful condition.

"Hair that fairly sparkles with new life and lustre!"

It's important to have your hair arranged to suit your type. The effect is lost, though, unless your hair is kept soft, lustrous, abundant.

This is easily done. A million busy women and girls know how. They put a little Danderine on the brush each time they arrange their hair. Try Danderine tonight and see how marvelously it cleanses your hair; gives it new life and lustre.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff, soothes, heals the scalp; stimulates the growth of long, silky, abundant hair. It makes the hair easy to manage; holds it in place for hours. Waves "set" with it, look nicer and stay in longer! Five million bottles used a year proves its popularity!

SEN. HAWES TO BE A SPEAKER IN BOSTON

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

The Traffic Club of New England, whose membership includes most of the railroad presidents and other big transportation leaders in these Northeastern States, will have as its principal speaker October 1 U. S. Senator Harry B. Hawes of Missouri. Senator Hawes will be introduced by his "old friend," George Hannauer, president of the Boston & Maine railroad. Both are enthusiastic sportsmen.

SENATOR HARRY B. HAWES

Senator Hawes has just completed a book on "Black Bass," and is the author of several federal fish and game conservation measures. Prof. William J. Cunningham of Harvard is president of the Traffic Club, which meets regularly at the Copley-Plaza. P. L. Stuart is secretary and treasurer, and E. D. Hussey is chairman of the entertainment committee. The Traffic Club in the past few years has had a notable galaxy of speakers, and it is at its gatherings that most of the newcomers in the New England transportation field have been introduced to their major associates.

Charles E. Mitchell, former Boston banker, born in Chelsea, heads the big bank merger which the National City Bank, the largest in America, with the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co. Total resources of the two will be around $2,300,000,000, a sum it would take a long time to count in dollar bills.

The battle of the financial giants for supremacy in the banking fields in the last two years has brought together nearly a dozen of the well known banks in a series of consolidations, placing first one institution at the top and then one of its rivals.

When the Guaranty Trust Co. and the National Bank of Commerce merged their forces earlier in the year, making a $2,000,000,000 institution, it was thought that this bank held first place in banking resources, but a check-up of National City's resources proved this to be incorrect.

The National City has now clinched its right to the title by absorbing the powerful Corn Exchange Bank, one of the largest and most influential state-chartered banks in New York. The Corn Exchange was a pioneer in extending branches in outlying sections of the city and its consolidation will give the National City Bank a total of more than 100 branches in Greater New York.

Ward Chase, treasurer of Berkshire Fine Spinning Associates says: "The Berkshire Fine Spinners Associates is a growing organization. It is natural that we should be minded to absorb other properties when the proper opportunity is presented. We have been looking at several textile properties in New England and may decide to open negotiations to buy some of them. There has been nothing determined as yet and no official action has been taken. Obviously I can neither confirm nor deny the report that we will make an offer for the Parker Mill in New Bedford, except to say that nothing has been done as yet but to look the plant over."

BULLS ACTIVE ON THE NEW YORK CURB

New York, Sept. 20 (AP)—Price movements were highly erratic on the curb exchange today.

The increase of $95,000,000 in brokers' loans was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that stock has been passing from strong to weak hands, and caused considerable nervous selling. Operations for the advance, however, were pressed forward vigorously in selected issues. The selling pressure appeared to have spent its force by late afternoon, and the list displayed a firmer tone.

The Insull stocks were strong on word that the utility group's West Utilities old stock shot up more than 40 points to within striking distance of its record figure, and Insull Utility Investment made substantial headway. Tampa Electric hit the 100-mark for the first time.

Such leaders as Electric Bond and Share and Electric Investors were called upon to absorb considerable selling, and sagged somewhat, as did Standard Power & Light, which has recently had a sharp rise in response to rumors of an exchange offer for its record figure, and Insull Utility Investment made substantial headway. Tampa Electric hit the 100-mark for the first time.

Such leaders as Electric Bond and Share and Electric Investors were called upon to absorb considerable selling, and sagged somewhat.

TURN TO CLASSIFIED SECTION OF TODAY'S PAPER FOR LISTINGS OF THESE CARS

TAKE to the open road—rid yourself for a while of the monotony of the city streets and home with its ever-pressing walls. Forget your cares by the many winding streams in the valleys. Enjoy life along the twisting mountain trails.

Get behind the wheel of a late model used car. Seek out the routes of historic New England and open 'er up! No period of stiffness when high speeds are detrimental—no period of wondering just what your car can do—no period of fretting and stewing because you can't "Open 'er up!" Just thousands of untroubled miles before you, to be driven at your pleasure—that is what a GOOD USED CAR represents.

So, if you are anxious to know just what your car is capable of—and if thrift is one of your characteristics—avail yourself of the unusual opportunities presented by the Automobile Merchants of Greater Boston.

Get in touch with them today. They are offering lowest possible prices and terms within reach of all.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

N. E.?

O. K.!

JUDGING by statistics recently promulgated by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, there IS a Happy Land and it is NOT far away.

NEW ENGLAND, this report says, has 50.2 telephones per 100 families, as compared with only 48.6 for the whole country.

New England has 49.4 RESIDENCE telephones per 100 families, as compared with 41.5 for the country.

Of every 100 homes in New England, 86 have ELECTRIC service; in the country at large, 67.6.

Of every 100 homes, 40.1 have radio sets in New England, 32.8 in the rest of the U. S. A.

We fall back a little in automobiles—66.1 against 75.8—but while this may inspire automobile salesmen to get busier, it will give no ordinary mortal much concern.

One item more, of GREAT significance:

The estimated annual income per family in New England is $3750—as compared with $3210 for the whole United States.

Don't get a wrong impression. The daddy of all the telephone companies serves the whole country, plays no favorites, is NOT telling us that New England is, in everything desirable, the most favored spot on earth.

In annual family income we ARE surpassed by the great Middle Atlantic group—New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia—where the average annual family income is $4140.

TWO sections, moreover, show greater telephone use.

In the group of states made up of Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and North and South Dakota there are 52.7 telephones per 100 families; in the group comprising Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, 50.6 telephones, four-tenths of 1 per cent more than New England.

The figures speak for themselves. The picture they present does not agree with what the Weeping Willies write for highbrow periodicals; they DO portray the New England KNOWN TO NEW ENGLANDERS.

We COULD be better off. We shall be. But, taking an airman's view of the country at large, who will say that N. E. is not O. K.?

Long Trail

Battle Has Begun for 33 Senate Seats to Be Filled in NOVEMBER OF NEXT YEAR

VOTERS of the old school, unaware that politics, like everything else in the jazz age, has been pepped up, must have read with surprise on Sunday that the Democrats of the Bay State were beginning the campaign of 1930.

Not so long ago, a campaign was TOO long if it lasted five weeks. This one, apparently, is to take 14 months.

The big battle will be for control in the Congress, all 435 seats in the House of Representatives and the 33 Senate seats which are to become vacant early in 1931. Among the Senators who will be stepping out—as at present advised they all hope to step right back again—are Gillett of our own State, Gould of Maine, Keyes of New Hampshire and Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island.

The Republican organization in Rhode Island was wise enough a year ago to nominate Judge Hebert, respected French-speaking American, for the place in the Senate which had been held for twelve years by Peter Goelet Gerry, Democrat. The State went for Alfred E. Smith by a small margin, but Gerry fell by the wayside.

Rhode Island Democrats now hope to return Mr. Gerry to Washington in Senator Metcalf's place. Mr. Gerry was in Boston on Saturday to attend the Jouett Shouse dinner of Massachusetts Democrats and talk things over with the Executive Chairman of the National Committee. Senator Walsh, lonesome now as the "only Democrat in the Senate from New England," told the diners he wants Mr. Gerry back there.

The G.O.P. in Little Rhody has other plans. While the Shouse dinner was in progress, in fact, Chairman William C. Pelkey of the State Committee was announcing in Providence that at its next meeting the organization would indorse Senator Metcalf's renomination and re-election.

The Rhode Island fight opens with a touch of unfriendliness, at least on the part of Chairman Pelkey.

"It is a well-known fact," says the Rhode Island chairman, "that Mr. Gerry and his associates have commenced in a characteristic method a delusion of the people into believing that Mr. Gerry is a Rhode Islander."

And is he not? The books say he is, placing his residence in Warwick. Beyond dispute, however, Peter Gerry IS a New Englander, a direct descendant of that Elbridge Gerry of Marblehead who was signer of the Constitution, Governor of Massachusetts and Vice-President of the United States.

But all we intended to do was call attention to the fact that the campaign of 1930 is in the way of getting under steam.

Dangerous Familiarity

A Gasoline Bath

(Copyright, 1929)

FAMILIARITY breeds contempt; avoid it.

Miners will throw dynamite sticks around even in cold weather as though they were logs of wood. Custom produces recklessness.

At Wink, Texas, three workers from the oil fields, their bodies stained with oil, decided to take a bath in gasoline. Something set fire to the gasoline. All were burned to death.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

ONE way to improve college educations would be have the professors dodge classes with the students.

Either that or do not give the professors any vacations in the summer time.

That's when they seem to do all their heavy thinking.

One eminent brewer of thought and a scientific bender of twigs seems to have spent June, July and August pondering on the growing use of profanity by flappers, debutantes and women.

What's that got to do with algebra?

The prof says that exhaustive studies indicate that women are cussing more than ever.

Looks like it's the prexy's own fault for getting them mad.

As for ladies using cuss words, professor, that's something we know nothing about.

The prof must have gleaned his information in a higher stratum of society than that to which we cling by virtue of hard labor and overblooming intalments.

We do not know the name of the lady who educated the professor in modern and ancient Billingsgate.

We do not know what she said.

We do not even know what the professor did.

If he was trying to do a cartwheel in a canoe, if he bounced his heavy brogans off her little tootsies in a barn dance, if he forgot to drive with one arm, then the lady was very correct in her choice of spoiled syntax.

If she chose to blister him with corrosive rhetoric that's her business.

But just because the professor is a punkola at a party is no reason why he can make a national issue of it.

Profanity is almost a share of the curriculum at many of our high-geared universities. The boys and girls matriculate in advanced English and graduate in hog Latin

It is a man's world only up until the second the gin is served.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HERE comes Bruce, all tangled up with his twenty years, wondering what it's all about and how he got that way. As YOU wondered when you were twenty. AS PERHAPS YOU'RE WONDERING NOW.

Dear Elsie Robinson,

Why is it that Youth is so restless and finds so little satisfaction? I am a young man, twenty years of age, a college graduate. I am fond of literature, music and art, also Business Administration which I have determined to make my life work. I have a good job and like my work but at times I am attacked by melancholia and feel that my life is filled with insipid, futile days.

Nothing to live for! Is this the aftermath of college? Illiterate people appear contented and peaceful but after four years of higher education I am obsessed with a surging and groping . . . for what I do not know.

I have never been in love. Perhaps this might be a panacea for my ill feelings but I am dubious—so dubious I will not allow myself to fall. I am of a very erratic nature but have always controlled it in my search for an education. But now I wonder if it's all worth while. What would you advise to cure this restlessness? BRUCE.

NOTHING ON EARTH, SON! THAT RESTLESSNESS IS THE GREATEST ASSET YOU CAN POSSIBLY HAVE.

Just at present you feel that it's getting you nowhere. You wonder if you're suffering from "the aftermath of college." You're not. YOU'RE SUFFERING FROM THE PRELIMINARY FIDGETS OF LIFE!

You haven't really lived yet—you're not educated. You've just had your ears washed and your nose blowed and your Sunday neck tie tied and you're waiting for the Big Party to begin. And while you wait, you toss around, chewing your nails, wondering if There Isn't Going to Be Anything But This.

THERE IS GOING TO BE SOMETHING MORE, BRUCE—HEAPS MORE—AND YOU WILL BE IN THE THRILLING MIDST OF IT ALL—PROVIDED YOU KEEP THAT RESTLESSNESS WHICH YOU NOW RESENT.

For restlessness is the yeast of life at work within you, AND WITHOUT THAT YEAST YOU ARE GOING TO BE MIGHTY FLAT DOUGH.

All great lives have been restless lives. They have never been contented lives. They have never been satisfied to stop and "leave well enough alone." They have always fidgeted, as you are fidgeting. They have been beset by doubts within and jeers without—People have asked them, "what was biting them," as they will ask you. People have punished them, sometimes terribly, because they insisted on being restless, because they wouldn't settle down and conform. But they didn't—and today the whole world owes them a debt because they wouldn't.

Socrates and Joan of Arc, Lincoln and Christ were restless people, too. They were restless as children, and they kept right on being restless and raising Cain until finally they ended at the cup of hemlock, the burning stake, the assassin's bullet and the Cross of Calvary. And I suppose their neighbors said it served them right. But you and I know now that the stakes and the cup, the bullet and the Cross, were only little incidents in THEIR careers. You and I know that THROUGH THEIR RESTLESSNESS AND REBELLION AND DISCONTENT THEY MADE A GLORIOUS ADVENTURE OF LIFE AND SHOWED US A WAY TO FOLLOW.

Dont avoid restlessness, Bruce—seek it! Never find the blue and seemingly futile days. RICH FIELDS MUST SOMETIMES LIE FALLOW. So must Youth if it would bear good crops. But through blue days or scarlet, keep yourself eager — keep yourself wondering and hoping and rebelling. KEEP YOURSELF ON THE MOVE—NO MATTER WHAT IT COSTS.

FOR LIFE IS WORTH ANYTHING YOU PAY FOR IT. SON.

A tart temper never mellows with age, and a sharp tongue is the only edged tool that grows keener with constant use. —Irving.

Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

DO you know when they come to you through the night?
Ah, my prayers are so close to you, Dear,
Before they wing to the Infinite
That it se ms you must waken must hear!

They drift they flutter about your head
As you lie in the moonlight there
With the wind-blown petals of roses spread
In the dusk of your loosened hair

My prayers, that beseech for you all good things,
All life's beauty and joy and light,
Linger around you on snowy wings
For a moment before their flight

Almost it seems you must stir
must hear
Swift wings as my prayers en bark,
My prayers that pause in your presence, Dear,
Whispering through the dark.

Modern Gay Life

How Do You Like It?

A COCKTAIL PARTY BY THE SUNLIT LIDO

HERE you see an "American bar" erected conveniently beside the blue waters of the Adriatic Sea, at the Italian bathing resort "The Lido," near Venice, and MOST fashionable.

Everybody seems happy in this picture. The two bartenders are Italians probably. The customers this side of the bar represent various nationalities. The person with the long wavy hair probably is of the Latin race, and probably a woman, although you cannot be quite sure. It might be a masculine genius growing his hair that way. Some look worse than that.

The wearing of clothing above the waist indicates that it is a lady. Nothing from the waist up seems the rule for men.

The others all seem happy in their "more or less" clothing.

Your great-grandmother seeing this would ask "what has the world come to?"

Modern youth replies, "It has come to its SENSES, dresses sensibly, does what it pleases, makes pleasure and gaiety the IMPORTANT things of life, with Puritan gloom at a discount of about 99 and 99-100 per cent.

One thing is certain, this kind of costume tends to develop human bodies.

The young man on the right with nothing in the way of clothing above his waist, won't let himself get fat, if he can HELP it. He will keep that curved-in stomach if he can.

If all of this is wicked, at least you can truly say that these happy Lido bathing-drinkers don't know it.

It is only fair, however, to tell them that not KNOWING that a thing is wrong, may not always help you. Philip Snowden, Great Britain's fighting Chancellor of the Exchequer, tells about a man who fished on Sunday, just before he died, and awoke in hell. He exclaimed, "I didn't know I had done wrong."

The devil replied: "Well, you know it now."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Thoughts while strolling: The dreamy eyed beatitude of convalescents on hospital porches. Odd looking Siamese cats with bobbed tails. The Chanins crowd the Shuberts in theater ownership. A once highly exploited screen lover—now a tailor.

Merle Crowell, a North Newport (Me.) boy, who made good in the city. Max Steuer, the famous criminal lawyer. Helen Morgan's half veil. A lunch counter featuring figs. And the taxi driver who resembles Vernon Castle even to his open-throated shirt. Old men who twitch their fingers.

What's become of hotels displaying dining room warnings: "Do Not Take Fruit to the Rooms?" Martha Ostenso the Norwegian novelist. Something pathetic about the average mat trying to tie up a bundle. The swaggering type of girl who seems invariably attracted to sailors.

Laurence Schwab a millionaire producer who used to be a newspaperman. The site of Madam Laloy's old red-ink parlor. Now graced with a skyscraper. What nights! What mornings! Nothing prostrates New York like a sudden shower. Dingy tobacco shops still selling rat-tailed stogies.

And the antiquated store where Fifth ave. butlers buy celluloid puff-ties and collars. The Paramount clock keeping better time. Norman Douglas who manages the New Amsterdam Theater. And turns out jingles for children's magazines. Robert Coleman a Broadway reporter.

Konrad Bercovici who writes the romance of gypsies. Wonder if modern grandmas have side pockets in their dresses? Vincent Lopez grows plumper. Rarely see Louis Mann's minstrel collar on Broadway any more. Those gushing women with black oily hair and long ear-rings who step all over you at the theater.

Luncage stores still cluttering up the sidewalk with trunks. Nate Raymond, a reputed high play gambler. Tippy Gray, who is always just going somewhere. Or just getting back. Margaret Wycherly's red hair. The town groaning under the tonnage of home going traffic. And the tired eyes!

Bus barons again threaten to stop spooning on the top decks. And for no good reason, save perhaps the crotchety whim of some withered flamingo. Mark Hartman!
